By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — The grand design of writing a new constitution to renew Canadian Confederation has clearly failed.

Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers, meeting in the constitutional conference Monday and today, are engaged mainly in a salvage operation.

Give Problem To a Commission

If we cannot agree on a new constitution, how can we patch up the old one?

Premier Ed Schreyer, the NDP swinger from Manitoba, suggests that maybe we should toss the whole problem to a commission of experts for 18 months.

Premier Ross Thatcher, the right-wing Liberal from Saskatchewan, thinks that perhaps Ottawa and Quebec can work the whole boring thing out between them, without bothering the other provinces which have more important practical problems on their minds.

But the consensus which seemed to be emerging from the sessions behind closed doors Monday and over the dinner table last night was to go to Square One.

Square One, if you can cast your memory back five or 10 or 30 years, is to bring the constitution to Canada before we try to rewrite it.

The present constitution is the British North America Act, legislation passed by the British Parliament in 1867 to join the colonies in North America into a new Dominion of Canada.

Humiliating Relic of the Past

To make changes in that constitution, Canada has to ask the British Parliament, very politely, if it would mind putting aside its own pressing business for a moment to amend the BNA Act.

The British Parliament always obliges, of course, but all Canadian politicians agree that it is a humiliating relic of colonial times.

The Canadian constitution should be removed from Britain and brought under our own control, so that we can change it as we wish. And there of course is the problem.

Could the federal government make changes in the BNA Act as it saw fit? That would outrage the provinces. Should the provinces have to consent to changes in the constitution? That would give a veto to Quebec—or even worse, to Premier Bennett of British Columbia.

Before we can all agree to bring the constitution back to Canada, there has to be general approval of a formula by which the law can be amended ~~once it is here~~.

Playing the Game For Years

The federal and provincial politicians have been playing the game for years without reaching a conclusion.

Back in 1964 they came close to a decision. Federal Justice Minister Guy Favreau, building on a foundation provided by his predecessor, Davie Fulton, developed a formula for repatriating and amending the BNA Act which seemed to meet objections.

All 10 provinces agreed to the scheme, dubbed the Fulton-Favreau formula, and the politicians and the papers were full of pronouncement about Canada at last cutting its colonial ties.

It was too early to fix a fluid and developing French-Canada within a new constitution. The opposition to the F-F formula was so fierce in Quebec that the Lesage government had to disown it and renege on its agreement

Robarts Criticizes Ottawa Fiscal Stand

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts of Ontario objected strenuousy today to a federal proposal to make major constitutional changes in governing the country's capital markets and financial institutions.

The federal position, not yet public, apparently was given privately to the provincial premiers before today's second session of the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Premier Robarts said in a statement he does not think "the major constitutional changes proposed" are necessary.

At present, the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction over currency, banking and monetary conditions.

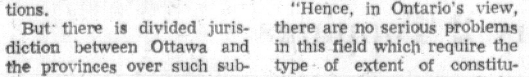
But there is divided jurisdiction between Ottawa and the provinces over such subjects as trust, loan and mortgage company organizations, credit unions and other important elements of the capital market.

The federal government is believed to be in favor of bringing a wider part of the market under federal regulations.

Mr. Robarts said Ottawa's present powers over currency, banking and monetary conditions are adequate and that it can exercise jurisdiction over a wider area, if it needs to, by agreement with the provinces without a formal constitutional change.

"The federal government can exercise firm control over the flow of credit through Parliament's exclusive jurisdiction over rates of interest," Mr. Robarts' paper said.

"Hence, in Ontario's view, there are no serious problems in this field which require the type of extent of constitutional revision proposed by the federal government."



Get 'em on th' wing.

Hijack Attempt Fails As Guard Shoots Man

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A male passenger demanding to go to North Korea attempted to hijack a Trans World Airlines jetliner today. He was shot by another passenger, a private guard for a shipment of securities, after being in control of the plane for a little more than an hour, deputy sheriffs said.

Robert E. De Nisco, 34, an employee of Brinks, Inc., stood up and shouted "Police" and began struggling with the hijacker after the pilot announced the hijack after the plane landed.

He was undergoing surgery at Peninsula Hospital, Burlingame, Calif. He was said to be in serious condition.

The FAA said Irwin was shot in the right side of the abdomen by a Brinks' guard in civilian clothes. The guard was protecting a private shipment of a valuable nature and was not a part of the newly established plane-guard system, the FAA said.

One shot only was said to have been fired.

Passengers said he boarded the plane in Los Angeles. The flight had started at New York, with a stop in Chicago.

PASSES NOTE TO PILOT

Moments before the pilot's announcement to the passengers, the hijacker had passed a note to him reading: "I have a gun and want to go to North Korea."

It was not known whether the hijacker was actually armed.

De Nisco, Brinks said, was carrying an undetermined amount of securites from Los Angeles to San Francisco.

The plane, Flight 15 from Los Angeles, had landed at 6:06 a.m. and the pilot advised the tower that a white male passenger had told him: "This plane is being hijacked. It will be going farther."

The pilot said there were 17 passengers aboard, plus the crew.

'WE WILL NOT WAIT FOREVER' — ARABS

AMMAN, Jordan (CP) — More than 50 hijack hostages remained locked in their secret prisons today while negotiations between their guerrilla captors and Western governments were at an impasse. Israel seemed to hold the key to the duration of their detention.

At a news conference guerrilla leaders warned again today that any attempt to free the hostages by force would only endanger their lives. They demanded swift bilateral action in swapping hostages for imprisoned guerrillas and warned: "We will not wait forever."

Sex 'Expression Of Today's Society'

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — The Roman Catholic Church must come to terms with sex and eroticism as legitimate expressions of present-day society, the World Theological Congress was told today.

The plea came in two keynote speeches on church and society from leading speakers—Most Rev. Gregory Baum of Toronto, professor at St. Michael's College, and Prof. Antonie Vergote of Louvain University in Belgium.

Father Baum told the 200 theologians and 700 observers the one-sided dominance of reason over feeling and sexuality had caused a dangerous split in the consciousness of Western society.

344,000 Strike GM

First Joint Action

By The Canadian Press

Negotiators for General Motors of Canada Ltd. and the United Auto Workers Union were to meet at 1 p.m. today for their first bargaining session against the background of a strike at GM plants in the United States and Canada.

Meantime, all was quiet on the picket lines at six GM plants in Ontario and one in Quebec where 27,000 UAW members walked off the job early today. Also on strike were about 317,000 GM employees in the U.S. to make a total of 344,000.

The strike marks the first time that Canadian and U.S. workers have joined forces against one of the Big Three auto manufacturers.

Negotiations to avert the showdown dragged on in Toronto until 10 p.m. Monday without making any headway. "They were an exercise in futility," a union spokesman said.

He said although Canadian and U.S. workers are bargaining separately in Toronto and Detroit, the key to a settlement lies with negotiators in Detroit.

STILL FAR APART

He said the two parties were still far apart on wages, pensions and the cost-of-living escalator formula in a new three-year contract.

The union has a strike fund of $120 million, enough for seven or eight weeks of strike pay at $40 a week. After that strikers are expected to fend for themselves.

Affected by the strike in Ontario are 14,000 workers in two GM plants in Oshawa, 6,500 at an engine and parts plant in St. Catharines, 2,600 at two plants in Windsor, about 1,350 at GM's Frigidaire division in Toronto, 680 in London where diesel locomotives, trucks and buses are built and 2,400 in Ste. Therese, Que.

Immediately after the midnight deadline, workers at Oshawa lit bonfires at plant entrances and set up picket lines.

Richard Kittle, chairman of Local 222 at Oshawa, said workers have formed kitchen committees, police committees, picket marshals and registration committees and are prepared to hold out until "we get justice and equity out of GM."

HIT BY WILDCATS

GM's Oshawa truck line and the car assembly plant in Ste. Therese were hit by wildcat walkouts Friday night and the Oshawa car assembly plant was closed Monday before the strike deadline.

The trim plant at Windsor also was closed before the deadline because about 725

WHAT THEY WANT

DETROIT (AP) — Here are the union and company positions on the three major issues standing between General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers in new contract bargaining:

WAGES — GM has offered wage increases in the first year of a three-year contract ranging from 36 cents hourly for a man making $3.50 an hour or less to 48 cents for a man making $6.34 and up. A man making $4.02, the current average hourly wage in the industry, would get 38 cents more. The union wants wage boosts ranging from 61½ cents to 84 cents. The man making the industry average would get 63 cents more.

In each of the second and third years GM would raise wages by 11 cents for the man on the bottom of the scale, by 13 cents for the man making the industry average and by 21 cents for the man at the top of the scale. The UAW has not specified what it wants in the second and third years, saying it depends on the company's willingness to change its stance on the cost-of-living allowance.

COST OF LIVING — GM says it will guarantee cost-of-living allowances of a least eight cents hourly in each of the last two years of the contract and will raise wages, depending on how the cost of living rises, by up to 16 cents in the second year and by a maximum of 12 cents in the third year. The union wants the company to return to the cost-of-living formula in effect prior to 1967 which had no minimums or maximums.

PENSIONS — GM has offered to provide a $500 monthly pension for a man retiring with 30 years' service, less $40 a month for anybody for each year under 58. A 48-year-old worker with 30 year's service could retire at $100 a month. The union wants everybody, regardless of age, who has 30 years' service to be able to retire at $500 a month.

'60 Drugs Sub-Standard'

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon Monday accused Health Minister Thomas Wells of undermining public confidence in all drugs and drug companies by not making public a government list of "unacceptable" drugs.

He said in an interview the list should be made public "so that citizens using the drugs can change to those which meet higher standards."

"Wells cannot say that on the one hand 60 drugs fall short of Ontario department of health minimum standards while on the other hand refusing to name the drugs specifically, as if it were in the public interest not to know."

The 60 drugs were omitted from a comparative price index of 440 drugs which also shows cost differences between generic and brand-name drugs.

Wells said that although the index won't be made public immediately people could still get the information by consulting doctors, dentists, pharmacists and hospitals after Oct. 1.

The minister said the list will be circulated as part of the government's Parcost — prescriptions at reasonable cost—plan that is expected to cut drug prices between 10 and 15 per cent.

AVAILABLE ON REQUEST

Reporters could also get a copy of the list after Oct. 1 by making a special request to his office, Wells said.

Doctors using the index will be able to choose the most inexpensive drug on the list for their patients.

The patient will then be able to take his prescription to a pharmacist participating in the Parcost plan and have it filled at the cost listed in the index plus a $2 dispensing fee.

In announcing Parcost Monday, Wells said he was "very concerned" that the drugs rejected by the Ontario list were approved by the federal Food and Drug Directorate.

AUSSIE YACHT LOSES MAN OVERBOARD

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuters) — Australia's Gretel II lost a crew member overboard during the third leg of today's first race at the America's Cup yachting series.

The Australian boat, which trailed Intrepid of the United States by about one minute eight seconds after the second leg, thus lost more valuable time as it had to pick up the man overboard.

Intrepid easily defeated Gretel by about 5½ minutes.

The rules specify that a yacht must finish with the same number of crew it had aboard when it started the race.

Jet Skids

NEW YORK (UPI) — An Alitalia DC8 jetliner skidded off a Kennedy Airport runway on landing today and split open, apparently as the result of a collapsed landing gear. There were no immediate reports of casualties or of fire.

West Coast Park Expansion Opposed

Ottawa has proposed a substantial increase in the West Coast national park, but has met opposition from the provincial government's forest service and two logging companies.

It was learned today that the federal proposals were made at a Monday meeting in Victoria.

The federal argument holds that the proposed extension is essential to protect the ecological state of park land already agreed upon.

The proposals would widen the boundaries of the west coast "lifeboat" trail to include the watershed of Cheewhat Lake, and a large watershed area including Tsusiat, Squalicum and Hobiton Lakes. The area forms a triangular territory at the western end of Nitinat Lake.

News of provincial opposition to the proposal brought immediate reaction from conservationists who warned against alienating the water sheds.

The meeting Monday was attended by representatives of the national parks service, the provincial parks branch, the B.C. Forest Service, and B.C. Forest products and MacMillan and Bloedel logging companies.

CHRETIEN
. . . more room to play

Under the West Coast parks agreement signed last April, the governments, who will share land acquisition costs, have until April 1, 1973, to consolidate the boundaries of the trail, known as phase three of the park creation.

Long Beach and the Effingham Islands are the first two phases.

Strike Effects Touch Loggers

A dispute between pulp companies and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada is deadlocked again, and the two sides appear to be communicating through the news media.

PPWC president Fred Mullin said in Vancouver today the stance taken by the companies' chief negotiator has affected other sectors of the forest industry, especially among logging divisions which supply pulp mills with chips.

WON'T BUDGE

Don Lanskail, chief negotiator for the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, announced Monday the bureau will not budge from its last offer which PPWC members rejected in a vote last week.

"Mr. Lanskail in refusing to meet with us is really showing that the companies are trying to foist an agreement upon our members," Mullin said.

The Canadian union has been on strike against eight mills—three on Vancouver Island—since July 24. Its members voted 66.9 per cent to reject a three-year contract that was accepted by two international unions, the Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the United Papermakers and Paperworkers.

'EQUAL TREATMENT'

"I reminded him that the basic principle in the industry is fair and equal treatment of all employees and said there can be no variation in the wages or the term of an agreement," Lanskail said.

Workers in Prince George and Crofton belong to different unions yet work side by side," Lanskail said.

Larskail also alleged there had been irregularities in voting by the union.

"Our information is that some of the locals—Gold River is one—didn't even have a vote, and that in others the voting was done by show of hands or on the picket lines.

"We wonder if this was a union-wide referendum by secret ballot."

MacMillan Bloedel said Monday an estimated 6,700 workers have been laid off as a result of the PPWC strike. The company said 1,700 loggers at eight camps which supply chips to the Harmac mill have been laid off.

Forest Fire Under Control

DUNCAN — The 500-acre fire southwest of Duncan, which raged out of control Sunday night, is now being mopped up, the B.C. Forest Service said today.

They feared high winds Monday night would cause the B.C. Forest products Ltd. Koksilah divisions slash fire to erupt again but the spokesmen said the night was quiet. Sixty men from the forest service and BCFP are still on the fire lines.

Gordon Speech Delayed a Day

The Times reported Monday former Liberal finance minister Walter Gordon was to speak at the University of Victoria on Wednesday, Sept. 23.

The date of Gordon's address has since been changed to Sept. 24.

Swissair Uses Armed Guards

ZURICH (Reuters) — Swissair flights will in future be accompanied by armed security guards, the commandant of the Zurich cantonal police announced today.

The commandant said the guards will be placed on the flights starting sometime this week.

A Swissair airliner was hijacked last week by Arab guerrillas and was one of four planes blown up.

"The government will be making a big mistake if it does not include the lakes, as I'm sure the area will be much more valuable as a park than for forestry."

John Harris, president of the Victoria Outdoor Club said today: "They have given the (federal) government a miserable thin strip of land. I'm disappointed. They are going to be sorry.

* * *

The boundary of the trail as currently drawn is about one-half mile in depth on a 60-mile route.

LARGEST INTEREST

B.C. Forest Products has the larger of the two logging interests in the area. Both logging companies operate on tree farm licences.

It is understood that part of the forest service objection to the expansion is based on the difficulty of finding similar forest areas to compensate the logging companies in the event of a boundary change of the kind proposed.

No acreages or other measurements of the proposed expansion were given.

PUBLIC OPINION

One government source said public opinion can be expected to play a critical part in the ultimate decision.

The logging companies can be expected not to oppose the boundary change as long as they are amply compensated. In past negotiations of this type, the companies have taken a flexible attitude, and B.C. Forest Products, is regarded as particularly cooperative.

From the start of negotiations for creation of the park, the federal government has attempted to get as much unspoilt land as possible, but the provincial government has been hampered by previous commitments to logging interests.

There has been a consistent effort by West Coast residents acquainted with the park area to have the park boundaries widened.

It has been suggested that the provincial government spend some of its $10 million B.C. Centennial gift from Ottawa to buy additional areas to include in the park.

with Ottawa and the other provinces.

When Daniel Johnson led the Union Nationale to power in 1966, he argued persuasively that the need was not for piecemeal approach to reform but for a whole new constitution, creating a brand new English-French confederation.

He caught the interest of Ontario Premier John Robarts, and the champagne spirit of the 1967 Centennial, when anything seemed possible, and swept us into a series of conferences designed to remake Canada.

Well, we have not done it. The spirit has gone flat, the hopes for a brave new confederation have evaporated.

After almost three years of federal-provincial negotiations, little progress has been made, wide differences remain, and all those cautious Canadians, from Trudeau onwards, who said that grand gestures weren't our style and that we should stick to nuts and bolts, have been proved correct.

Ontario's Robarts suggested it was high time to have another look at an amending formula, and Trudeau conceded that maybe it was.

Meantime, of course, the constitutional conference can attempt to tidy up the few general areas of agreement and begin to explore some new problems without any sense of urgency which might distract from current issues such as selling wheat.

It's a careful, sensible, grey Canadian approach to reform of the constitution, and it may even one day produce a few changes in the BNA Act.

But it won't give us all, English and French, a Canadian creed to live by.

Railway Executive Dies At 63

EDMONTON (CP) — Donald F. Purves, vice-president of Canadian National Railways mountain region, died today in University Hospital where he had been a patient since Aug. 1.

Purves, 63, started with CNR as summer help when he took a job as assistant purser in the company's northern British Columbia and Alaska steamship service.

Born in Gander Bay, Nfld., he grew up in Victoria and graduated from University of British Columbia with an honors degree in commerce. He did post-graduate work in transportation economics and industrial engineering at Columbia University in New York before joining CNR in Montreal.

Before coming to Edmonton as a vice-president in 1968, Purves led a CNR industrial development team which established a wide range of new forest, mineral, fishing, manufacturing and other industrial undertakings — many of them in the multi-million dollar capital investment category.

COPE Plans Half Slate

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Committee Of Progressive Electors has announced it will not run a full slate of candidates in the December municipal elections because it does not want to tread on the toes of the NDP party.

With the NDP decision to run half a slate, COPE has decided to do the same.

COPE president Frank Kennedy explained: "We feel it is imperative to avoid any competitive struggle between COPE and the NDP in the coming civic elections.

workers did not show up for work. The last shift at the transmission plant, about 250 workers, finished at midnight.

Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the UAW, said at a news conference Monday he will conduct an investigation into the unauthorized early walkouts at Oshawa, Windsor and Ste. Therese.

He said the wildcats were the action of "a handful of hotheads" and the instigators would be disciplined.

ENDS RUMOR

McDermott also said that by singling out GM as the strike target the UAW "has put to rest the rumor that GM is too big for us, and that we always picked Ford and Chrysler because they were the weak sisters."

The shutdown will cost the workers about $42.5 million a week in wages, but will also cost GM a whopping $30 million a day in lost production.

Some union and industry sources predicted the strike would be lengthy, and might exhaust the UAW's $120 million strike fund. Union officials said the strike funds would last seven to eight weeks, with the 344,000 workers on strike drawing up to $40 weekly each.

The economic pinch of the strike felt immediately in some Ontario areas but not for two to four weeks in others.

Harold Wakefield, corporate manager of Duplate of Canada Ltd. which makes automobile glass in Oshawa and Hawkesbury, Ont., said his company, which employs a total of 1,000 men, sells most of its output to GM.

"If our customer is on strike that pretty well shuts us down," he said.

But at the giant Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. plant in Hamilton, A. R. McMurrick, vice-president for sales, said a two-week strike "wouldn't cause us a ripple."

"But beyond that it would become serious" because about nine per cent of Canada's steel output goes into cars.

GM has 900 Canadian suppliers and more in the United States. Every day GM needs more than 10,000 tires, 3,000 tons of steel as well as textiles, batteries, spark plugs, plastic and thousands of other items.

Decreased spending by the 24,000 strikers also represent a loss to the economy. Ther basic pay was $160 a week before the strike and now they only receive $40 a week in strike pay. GM's wages in the Oshawa plants alone added $2 million a week to the local and national economies.

Police Discount Idea Mafia-Types Involved

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett today called for an official investigation into the possibility of Mafia involvement in the "professional attempt" on the life of West Vancouver Ald. Jack Forster on the weekend.

However, West Vancouver Police Chief Moir MacBrayne discounted the suggestion of an organized plot and said it was more likely the work of a "sadistic goon."

Police are still taking statements from the people who found Forster but said the department is puzzled by the apparent lack of a "murder" motive and the fact that the attacker could not have known Forster would be in the harbor area at that particular time.

'SIMILARITIES'

Barrett said he wasn't making any connection between the bizarre attack on Forster and the alderman's record of opposition to the controversial Cypress Bowl development but added: "If anyone does an examination of contract killing, they will find similarities that cannot be escaped."

Forster was found tied up with a sack over his head in Eagle Harbor near his West Vancouver home on Sunday. He had been struck on the head by an unidentified assailant and tied to a rock.

He was hauled from the water by the crew of a passing boat.

'LYING IN WAIT'

Forster had not walked his dog on the beach for some months, said the police chief.

Also, MacBrayne said, the attacker would have had a better chance to overcome the alderman on the wooded paths leading to the beach than on the harbor front.

"Under the circumstances, although we haven't concluded our investigation, it appears more like the work of a sadistic goon lying in wait for anyone who passed by rather than an attempted murder."

A freshman alderman, Forster campaigned on a platform to bring a municipal damage suit against the promoters of the controversial Cypress Bowl development and topped the polls when elected for a two-year term in December.

Bennett Officiates At Opening

For Toronto-Dominion's new branch, 3 p.m. closing becomes opening time when Premier Bennett snips the ribbon, accompanied by T-D executive vice-president S. T. Paton, Toronto, G. T. Corlett, Pacific division general manager, and P. W. Heyes, business development manager, Vancouver.

Since demolition of the old T-D building at the site more than a year ago, a $1.5 million, six-storey structure has risen, with the branch operating meanwhile from a temporary location across Douglas Street.

The new premises offer the bank and other tenants a total 37,000 square feet of accommodation.

J. R. Stewart, formerly manager at T-D's Yates and Broad branch, will be manager of the new branch.

BLESS FRUCTOSE AND PASS DRIVER

BOSTON (UPI) An imbiber won't get as drunk if he sticks to screwdrivers, bloody marys and other cocktails containing fruit juices.

A study conducted by the Boston City Hospital alcohol unit says the fruit juice in such drinks contains a sugar called fructose, a substance which reduces a body's alcohol level.

The investigation, conducted by Dr. Leah M. Lowenstein of the Harvard and Boston university medical schools, was published Monday in the Journal of the American Medical Association. It said if fructose is injected into an individual's bloodstream the alcohol levels reduce darmatically — about 43 per cent, starting within 15 minutes.

Dr. Lowenstein conducted a three-day study of 12 volunteers who were chronic alcoholics. They were given straight shots of bourbon and some received fructose injections. The ones who did were not nearly so intoxicated as the one who didn't receive them, she said.

Poor Students Accident-Prone

OTTAWA (CP) — Young people who have had trouble with the law or difficulty making grades at school appear to be more accident-prone driving a car, a study at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., shows.

The study compared the family, educational, employment and criminal backgrounds of 205 under-21s who had been involved in accidents with a matching group of young, no-accident drivers.

It showed no significant difference between the accident and no-accident groups in such factors as marital status of parents, use of drugs or alcohol, health or whether the subject attended a driving school or took a driver-education course.

The study, supported by a federal public health grant, was conducted among Kingston-area youths in 1968 and 1969 by Arthur S. Kraus, Robert Steele, M. Gwen Thompson and William R. Ghent. Results are published in the Journal of Safety Research, a Chicago publication of the U.S. National Safety Council.

They interviewed under-21 drivers of motor vehicles who had had an accident involving fatalities, injuries or property damage exceeding $100. A matching number of no-accident young people, who had driven about the same mileage as the accident group, also were questioned.

BREAK DOWN GIVEN

The accident group was divided further to single out a subgroup whose accidents involved only one vehicle.

Among the results:

—Thirty per cent of the whole accident group and 40 per cent of those in one-vehicle accidents had failed one or more grades in elementary school, compared with 17 per cent in the no-accident group.

—Eighteen per cent of the accident group as a whole—20 per cent of the one-vehicle group—had been in vocational or occupational courses in high school, but only seven per cent of the no-accident group were in such courses.

—Thirty-nine per cent of the accident group, 45 per cent of the one-vehicle group and 27 per cent of the no-accident group had started smoking at or before age 16.

DROPOUTS RATE HIGH

—Thirteen per cent of the accident group, but only four per cent of the no-accident young people, had started full-time employment by age 17.

—Fourteen per cent of the accident group, 18 per cent of the one-vehicle group, and only two per cent of the no-accident group had been charged with a criminal offence apart from a driving violation.

Among those charged, more than six per cent of the accident group but none of the no-accident group had been accused of indictable offences such as theft or assault.

If a person learning to drive or applying for a licence is known to have been charged with an indictable offence "it would appear advisable to give it serious attention in any effort to identify drivers with a high risk of accidents," the study says.

Excessive Radiation Ruled Out

LONDON (AP) — A section of Britain Windscale nuclear power plant, sealed off more than three weeks ago after an alarm over excessive radiation, will remain closed until a full sceitific inquiry is published shortly.

Officials of the Atomic Energy Authority insist "there was no active contamination" in the building, where plutonium is recovered from atomic wastes.

The alarm bells rang through Windscale Aug. 24, indicating that the level of radiation in the laboratory had risen above the safety limit.

Two men working at the time were given thorough medical checks which proved totally negative, officials said.

In 1957, less than a year after Windscale opened, a nuclear pile overheated, uranium rods caught fire and radioactive iodine escaped into the atmosphere.

Sales of milk produced in a surrounding area of 200 square miles were banned, costing the atomic energy authority $168,000 in compensation to local farmers.

No ill effects on humans or livestock ever were reported.

HIJACK SURVIVOR NOW AQUARIUM STAR

TORQUAY, England (UPI) — Ted the hijacked turtle has parted company with his schoolboy owners and become the star attraction at a Torquay seafront aquarium.

The turtle, named after Prime Minister Edward Heath, survived the hijacking ordeal last week aboard the British Overseas Airways Corp. jet in the Jordanian desert.

His owners, Nigel Hatcher, 15, and his brothers, Bruce, 13 and Michael, 11, kept the turtle alive during their captivity by feeding him scraps from their sandwiches.

Monday, the boys, who returned to school at Rochester from Bahrein where their father is an oil company executive, received a call from a Torquay aquarium owner offering them $60 for the turtle. They accepted.

The aquarium official said the turtle would be renamed Hijack and become the star attraction.

'Celebration of Survival' Marked by Young Americans

SHARON, Conn. (WP) — Five hundred well-scrubbed Young Americans for Freedom have just ended a tenth anniversary gala that was more a celebration of survival than of success.

Ten years after its founding under the auspices of columnist William F. Buckley, Jr., the organization is still taking on "the liberal establishment," doing the tough grass roots work for conservative candidates and lashing out at the "bankruptcy of liberalism."

The conference, which began on Wednesday at the University of Hartford and wound up Saturday in a pilgrimage to Buckley's lush estate in Sharon, was striking not only for a prediction by Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) that there will be "wholesale arrests" by the justice department next year of people the senator termed "revolutionaries," but it was also marked by an air of confidence, signs of optimism and reports of genuine progress in bringing more people into the conservative fold. These lent credence to the claims of the YAF that America is "turning the corner" towards conservatism. Goldwater cited a poll showing that 55 per cent of all Americans would call themselves "conservatives" — Goldwater, who in 1964 refused to acknowledge polls predicting his devasting defeat by President Johnson.

David Keene, national chairman of the YAF, said that YAF's membership had doubled in three years, from 25,000 in 1967 to 50,000 at present: a sharp upswing which almost precisely parallels the rise of terrorist tactics of the far left.

Eighty per cent of the YAF's new members, Keene asserted, were gained as a direct result of heightened campus militancy.

While claiming that the Young Americans for Freedom are on the rise as a political entity, Keene is realistic about his organization: "We're not sweeping the campuses. We occupy a position other than centrist. But our position on campus violence is a centrist position."

Wrecking the Balance

ONE OF THE MOST SERIOUS ecological disasters of the Canadian north may now be in process in the 2000-square-mile Athabasca delta. Part of the deterioration—exactly how much is now being determined—is believed to be the direct result of the W.A.C. Bennett Dam on the Peace River. Loss of a portion of the Peace River flow by impounding above the dam is contributing — and, it is suspected, may be a major cause — of a dangerous drop in the water levels of a vast territory comprising lake and channel floodlands where the Athabasca River flows into its lake. The ecological losses may well prove to be enormous — certainly if they were counted into the costs of the Peace River hydro-electric complex they would subtract substantially from the benefits of that installation.

But the worst might be yet to come, according to experts studying the situation, for Mr. Bennett's Peace River power development is only one of many northern projects now on provincial and federal drawing boards which could have inestimable effects on the wildlife and the natural environment of Canada's northlands. British Columbia's Peace River power centre may emerge as the horrible example of how not to do it, and hence serve to prevent other costly ecological errors on other Canadian streams.

The federal Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, in a recent report, tells of the research of the Canadian Wildlife Service in measuring the drop in water levels and determining its effects. One result could be that a direct conflict may occur between future hydro-electric development in Northern Canada and preservation of the northern environment. A wrong choice could be costly.

The Peace River passes to the north of the Athabasca delta and its many lakes but is connected by numerous channels. Formerly, when the Peace River was in flood, the surplus water forced the Athabasca River back, raising the levels in the lakes and spreading water out over miles of marshlands. This nourished the soil, and created an environment favorable to many forms of plant and animal life.

But now, due to lower summer levels in the Peace and, it is held, to the action of the Bennett Dam in holding back and regulating flow, Peace River flood conditions are rare, the water levels in the Athabasca delta are low and stable, and the consequent ecological changes in the terrain are causing concern. The Canadian Wildlife Association studies seek to determine exactly what is happening.

The effects range all the way from loss of normal foods for muskrat and bison to encroachment of willow thickets over grasslands which formerly were the habitat of ducks and geese. A million waterfowl pass through the delta area on their migrations; 100,000 birds use the area as their breeding ground. Serious interference with the normal conditions could affect the whole continent.

These are the facts of ecology which are brushed aside by power proponents. But they cannot be forever denied. It will do us little good to create a wasteland in order to produce electrical power which cannot repair the damage done. As the Departmental statement says: "These predictions (to result from the collected data) should have an important place in the assessment of the benefits and costs of many major engineering works of massive scale." How much can we reject nature before it rejects us?"

Confused Congressional Elections

ON NOVEMBER 3 A TROUBLED United States electorate will decide who will fill all 435 seats in the House of Representatives, one third of the Senate's 100 seats, plus a number of governorships and state legislature memberships. While the Democrats have sizable majorities in both houses there is widespread speculation that a swing to the Republican right might end, or at least lessen, the Democrats' long Congressional dominance.

Following the Senate's defeat of the amendment to halt the Vietnamese War by the end of 1971, it became apparent that Southeast Asia was a poor plank to prop up a shaky Democratic house. Writing in the Washington Monthly, one of the founders of Students For McCarthy in the 1968 presidential campaign acknowledges that President Nixon has effectively split United States peace forces by depicting them as near traitors and setting the debate as one between loud-mouthed militants and the silent majority.

If there is a major issue many U.S. commentators think it comprises student violence, campus unrest and the racial situation. On these anxiety-ridden issues the Republicans have the advantage. The Democrats may have to be content with less emotional issues such as unemployment, high taxes and inflation. But polls indicate that fewer U.S. voters are identifying with either party — a growing trend in the last two presidential elections.

Perhaps the United States is heading into an era where ideas, rather than parties, become polarized. It would be impossible to predict how new United States political alignments might affect Canada. Traditionally, Canada has always dealt better with liberal, rather than conservative United States administrations, regardless of their political labels. But there are few traditional trends in American politics today.

The Writ of Assistance Is Obsolete

THE CANADIAN BAR ASSOciation has added its voice to that of a number of Canadians in opposing the unlimited powers of entry and search enjoyed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Meeting in Halifax the bar association annual meeting approved a recommendation to the federal government that the RCMP be restricted to the use of ordinary search warrants — the same as any other police department.

Made out to individual peace officers, the so-called "writ of assistance" is an obsolete instrument from English Common Law and dates back to the reign of Charles II. Not only can the officer holding such a document break in and search but he can also break into walls, floors, furniture and plumbing fixtures — and if no contraband is found, the suspect has no right to sue for damages. That such an unjust, arbitrary law should exist on the books, let alone be in common use, is incredible.

Addressing the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police recently, Justice Minister John Turner said, "Canada needs a more contemporary criminal law — credible, enforcible, flexible and compassionate." The writ of assistance does not qualify on any of these grounds except flexibility, and it is only flexible in the sense that it gives a policeman carte blanche in dealing with private citizens who are accused before the law.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

The Tories Find No Easy Road

THE difficulty about the Conservative caucus last week was that it was almost bound to suggest a procession of erring scholars to Mr. Stanfield's woodshed. This is not to deny its necessity or the wisdom of such disciplinary measures as may have been accepted in the party interest. As a result of the caucus, a curtain has been drawn over the Saskatoon insurgency until such time, presumably, as we have a definite Coates-like study from a Prairie Conservative of literary bent. For the present, we have a summary of sorts from Jack Horner, who says in effect that the meeting was a splendid idea but that he will never summon another without the press, which he does not hold in conspicuously high regard.

Western

Mr. Horner has also directed attention to another point. The Gallup poll appeared on the day preceding the Conservative get-together. This regrettable event, which could not have been anticipated, had the natural effect of simulating a good deal of discussion of a character too vigorous and red-blooded for general consumption. There has, indeed, been a tendency to refer to it in rather hushed and guarded tones.

One fact at least is plain. The Conservatives at mid-term, for the reasons indicated by Mr. Horner, are an unhappy group. What baffles them is the continuing popularity of the prime minister at a time when the government is plagued with troubles and when, by all past experience, the fortunes of the major opposition party ought to be on the mend.

No Belief in Miracles

It is tempting in this situation to believe that there must be some shortcut to power. But there is little to suggest that Mr. Stanfield believes in short-cuts or, for that matter, in miracles. He is still blamed by some Conservatives for his refusal to precipitate a crisis, which might (or might not) have led to power when the Pearson minority government was defeated on a tax bill. His manner in opposition has been deliberate; he has spoken of himself as a "patient man" and he gives the impression of a leader willing to wait upon rather than to force events. This may be sensible, but patience is in dwindling supply among Conservative members as Parliament moves into the second half of its term.

Faith in short-cuts is doubtless reinforced by the presence in Parliament of John Diefenbaker. Not only did Mr. Diefenbaker find a short-cut to power in 1957—when some of his rivals were thinking in terms of "the election after the next election"—he also created and long maintained the Western bloc; something never before known in his party's history.

A Different Ex-P.M.

There is nothing unusual about the presence in Parliament of a former prime minister. Macdonald, Laurier, Meighen, King and Bennett continued to sit in the House after election defeats but they sat as party leaders intent on political come-backs. Mr. Diefenbaker is a former prime minister who does not lead his party; is in a sense detached from his party since he does not attend caucus and, as happened on Wednesday, holds his own press conferences. This places Mr. Stanfield in a singular position; he must operate in the shadow of a predecessor who still commands strong loyalties in sections of the party, who holds strong views about the party, who is available for Saskatoon meetings, and who represents a style in politics which is certainly not Mr. Stanfield's.

The view that things would be better for the party if Mr. Stanfield would only change his style and borrow from Mr. Diefenbaker's book (or conveniently step aside in favor of someone who could) ignores an important difference between 1970 and 1957. Mr. Diefenbaker faced an elderly government, long in power and lacking in personalities with wide popular appeal. Mr. Stanfield faces a youthful and very ambitious government whose leader has been remarkably successful in communicating with the nation's voters. It may be that with time and accumulating difficulties Mr. Trudeau's personal popularity will decline. At the moment, however, the notion that there is a Conservative shortcut, if only the Conservatives can find it, may be sheer illusion.

It may also be dangerous since the Conservatives, if they are to regain support, must appeal to the country as a responsible alternative. Mr. Stanfield can and does make serious speeches; he has, for example, delivered effective criticisms of the white paper on taxation. But anything gained by such campaigns can be lost overnight if the quest for short-cuts results in secret meetings which Mr. Stanfield himself feels bound to characterize as "stupid."

The rebuilding of a defeated party is often a very slow and tedious job; it is improbable that the Liberals after the 1958 disaster, would have recovered so soon had it not been for an astonishing combination of circumstances, including a mid-election monetary crisis. But the Conservatives, since that time, seem to have clung to a hope that some miracle would make the hard work unnecessary. They have been a party of improvization. In 1965 they trusted in filibuster and scandals. Even Mr. Stanfield, in 1968, gambled, rather uncharacteristically, on what proved a fatal bid for Quebec support.

Policy Needed

There is little to indicate, however, that Mr. Stanfield, after that sobering experience, is much of a believer in easy routes to power. Against a government led by Mr. Trudeau, a long-term strategy would probably accord better with the true situation of the opposition party. But even the long term will be unpromising unless the Conservatives make a beginning by fashioning policy in accordance with Conservative thought in the country. Up to now the effort in this direction has been unimpressive. This is probably an important reason for the downward drift in Gallup preferences which so upset Mr. Horner and his colleagues in Saskatoon.

Doctor's Rebuttal

In the play "Who's afraid of Virginia Woolf" the neurotic husband and wife invent a sadistic game called, "Let's get the guests" in which they jeer at and attempt to humiliate their guests. They invariably end up by degrading and humiliating themselves.

A current variant of this vicious game is called "Let's get the doctors" or if that palls it becomes "Let's get the hospitals." The leading players are government and the press and the neuroses behind it is fairly obvious.

Returning at 3.00 a.m. having spent 19 straight hours in the O.R. at St. Joseph's, my eye fell upon your columnist Jack Scott's article with the "News of the World" type headline, "Their own mag., The inside look at doctors lives". My weariness momentarily vanished at the prospect of some juicy gossip about my colleagues until I realised it was just another weary round of the one-sided game of "Let's get the doctors".

What does the long column tell us? Merely that some doctors invest in the stock market and can get advice on this from their magazine called "Canadian Doctor". If Mr. Scott had done his homework and not merely copied out quotations from the magazine he would have seen that "Canadian Doctor" is not a medical journal at all and has no connection with the Canadian Medical Association whatsoever. It is published by National Business Publications in Gardenville, Quebec and is sent, unsolicited, to doctors. It is purely a commercial venture and gets its revenue from drug and equipment manufacturers.

Mr. Scott found the magazine so fascinating he couldn't put it down. Personally I find it so uninteresting I never pick it up. I am sending Mr. Scott a copy of the real doctor's magazine — the Journal of the Canadian Medical Association and perhaps he call tell your public if he sees any similarity in the two magazines.

There are other misleading titles, "M.D. of Canada", "Modern Medicine of Canada" and the "Medical Post". None of these has any connection with the C.M.A. and are sent unsolicited.

The raw nerve ends of doctors which Mr. Scott alludes to are not due to publication of accurate facts but rather to misleading information and the "half truth" in the best Dr. Goebbels tradition. Better stay behind after school Scott and rewrite that essay, we don't put up with slovenly work here!—DR. HUGH H. MACARTNEY, 2809 Burdick.

FROM NEW YORK

By JAMES RESTON

Impotence of Power Against Fanatics

THE supreme irony of this age of power is its impotence to deal with determined or fanatical minorities. Mr. Jefferson, who had very litle military power, could deal effectively with the Barbary pirates early in the 19th century, but Mr. Nixon, who has apocalyptic power, cannot handle the Arab pirates without risking the lives of the Americans he wants to rescue. You can almost put it down as a rule that the more complicated a society is the more vulnerable it is to sabotage.

Reston

It is not only the great jet airliners that can be disrupted at the whim of a few desperate men, but even vast modern cities like New York are at the mercy of any fanatics who know how to get at the critical centres of electrical power.

The violent events of the last few years illustrate the point. We have not yet had to face organized guerrilla war in the urban centres of America, but the skyjackers, the wreckers in the universities, and even the unorganized hoodlums have given us some idea of what can be done by tyrannical minorities.

Each of these problems, of course, is different, but in all of them only a very few men were able to bring the operations of vast enterprises to a halt. Probably the most spectacular example of the power of the weak over the strong has been the operation of the Communist guerrillas in Southeast Asia, first against the organized power of France, and then even against an American expeditionary force of over half a million men.

Angry and Demented

The danger in the preesnt wave of sky-jackings is that it can easily spread into an infectious disorder, and not only in the Middle East. It is a quick and comparatively easy way to dramatize any cause, and it seems to have a compelling appeal for deranged minds.

Even the risks involved in highjacking a jet or going down the right manholes to sabotage the power of a city are scarcely as great today as robbing a bank. Nixon, for all his power, cannot even perform the first duty of government, which is to protect its own citizens, not because he is weak, but because his strength is so great that he dare not use it.

He has 1,800 Marines with the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean and a 1,500-man airborne brigade in Germany. It is within his power to parachute them in the night into the Jordanian desert and overwhelm the Arab pirates, but he might easily lose the lives of the trapped Americans in the process.

So we are left with the problem of dealing with anarchy. Putting a military guard on planes in international traffic is not a solution, though the armed guards on the El Al planes have complicated the problem and raised the risks for the skyjackers.

Probably the most effective sanction would be to isolate any country whose citizens engage in international piracy. This would mean an agreement by all the major airlines not to fly into any country harboring the pirates, and not allowing that country's planes to use the air fields of the major nations of the world.

The objection to this, of course, is that the sanction is not precise, and in the case of Jordan would actually punish the government that is fighting the guerrillas. Nevertheless, such an arrangement might encourage the Arab governments to take more vigorous action against the pirates than they have been willing to take in the past.

There is, however, no foolproof way to deal with the problem. Closer inspection of baggage would help. So would very strict limitations on hand-baggage that could be carried into the cabin, but short of turning international flights into nudist parties, which might be a little awkward or even embarrassing, there would still be the danger of concealing weapons even from a vigilant frisker.

Accordingly, President Nixon has undoubtedly been right to hold his temper and hope that the Arabs would hurt their cause so severely by these adventures that they will stop the nonsense on their own.

Highly Infectious

This, however, is far from a sure thing. All you have to do is take a long walk through almost any American city these days to realize how many angry and demented people there are wandering around loose — many of them willing to risk their lives to remove some real or imagined grievance.

Once the normal restraints of interdependent cities or systems are broken, the anarchy tends to feed on itself, and this is now the danger in a world with so many frustrated and even demented people.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"HOW COME YOU'RE WATCHIN' BIRDS? IS YOUR TELEBISHION SET BUSTED?"

Looking Back

From the Times of September 15, 1910.

Senator Root who was chief representative of the United States in the Atlantic Fisheries arbitration, says the award favors his country. Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, who looked after Canada's interests, and other distinguished council on the British side see in the decision a victory all along the line for Canada's case. We hope it will not be necessary to have another hearing of the Hague Tribunal to determine which nation wins. The fact that each thinks it won is a tribute to the tribunal.

It's Time for Trudeau to Reawaken National Dream

"The National Dream" is the title of Pierre Berton's splendid new book on the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The great steel road was truly the stuff on which dreams are made, the dream of a Canadian nation from sea to sea.

The critics rightly said that the promise to build the railway was an act of insane recklessness. It was against reason for a new country of less than four million people to undertake to build the world's longest railroad over territories known only to be almost impassable.

No sensible government would have set out to build the CPR. No Prime Minister with a proper sense of priorities would have dreamed of trying it.

John Diefenbaker might have had the vision during a flight of oratory, and then suffered paralysing second thoughts. Lester Pearson would have plunged into the project to meet a crisis of the day, and survived to regret the cost.

Pierre Trudeau would never touch it. Such a wild project as the CPR would not survive a moment under his style of government. The expert consultants would prove by cost-benefit analysis that the railway was out of the question. The cool advice of the Privy Council mandarins would expose the absurdity of the whole conception. The first cabinet meeting would tear the idea to pieces.

The Prime Minister himself would warn of the danger of raising expectation unlikely to be fulfilled. British Columbians, he would say, would lose faith in politicians if they were promised a railway that might never be built. Better to let them go to the United States, he would suggest, than to lure them into confederation by conjuring dreams.

By ANTHONY WESTELL

And then Trudeau would want to discuss the idea of a railway with audiences all across Canada — all the way from Nova Scotia to the Lakehead.

You can have the railway or you can have lower tariffs and cheaper goods, he would explain, but you cannot have both. We can try to build a road through the northwest wilderness where nobody lives, or we can improve the service through the Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario, he would offer, asking the people to participate in the decision.

No, under the Trudeau style of government, it is all too likely that there would have been no National Dream, no CPR and no Canada from coast-to-coast.

And that is what is wrong with the Prime Minister. He puts his faith in reason, dialogue, the sensible ordering of priorities. He offers no political drama, no vision, of a grand design, no excitement of nation-building.

The Just Society has been discarded as merely a slogan which has served its purpose. What now is heard of One Canada?

Trudeau's own charisma has to some extent concealed the lack of a unifying theme in his government; the man is so attractive that he represents in a way the national dream of what a Canadian should be.

His policies examined one by one are convincing, reasonable, or, at least, hard to refute in any ringing way. They are realistic and responsible, reaching for desirable objectives within the country's grasp. They will not overstrain our economy, overreach our national strength, expose us to hostility or reduce us to frustration.

They are sensible policies for cautious Canadians, for the sort of dull, conservative never-take-a-chance people we have been taught to believe that we are.

The value of Berton's book, beyond being wonderfully readable history, is that it reminds us that Canadians don't have to be dull. They have had a National Dream, taken reckless gambles, achieved miracles of construction, produced heroic figures.

Trudeau became Prime Minister amid expectations that were hopelessly exaggerated. It was understandable that he wished to deflate them gently before they collapsed suddenly in disastrous disillusion.

But now there has been enough deflation, enough reorganization and reordering of priorities. Now is the time to draw all the policies and white papers into a concept of Canadianism, into a National Dream of the seventies.

The throne speech opening the new session of Parliament next month would be a good place to start.

In Mad, Mad World of N-Arms The Balance Has Been Upset

By ALUN CHALFONT
New Statesman

It is not wise to assume that the actions of a man in power will always be consistent with the opinions he expressed before achieving it.

However, when the man is President Nixon's guru in the abstruse theology of defence and foreign affairs, and the subject is nuclear diplomacy it cannot be entirely irrelevant to the current Strategic Arms Limitation Talks to recall a lapidary pronouncement from Henry Kissinger's important book Nuclear Weapons and Foreign Policy.

The horrors of nuclear war, he wrote, "are not likely to be avoided by a reduction of nuclear armaments."

As reduction of limitation of nuclear armaments is clearly what the Soviet-American talks are about, something, or someone, must have changed very radically since 1957, when this pessimistic statement was made.

'Appalling Implications Of Spiralling-Arms Race'

Obviously, a great deal has changed. To put it at its simplest, the nuclear equation of power, the stalemate which has hitherto preserved a pecarious balance between the two super-powers, has been threatened by new developments in the technology of weapons systems.

The balance, expressed in terms of the deterrent policies which are at the heart of both Russian and American strategic thinking, is based on what is called, in the esoteric jargon of nuclear strategy, a sure second-strike capability.

This means the possession by each side of a nuclear striking force powerful and invulnerable enough to inflict terrible damage upon its enemy even after that enemy had subjected it to an all-out nuclear attack, or first strike. Thus aggression with nuclear weapons would be an act of national suicide.

The invulnerability of the second strike, or retaliatory force, has been assured in a number of ways — by emplacing intercontinental missiles in underground silos, virtually safe from anything but a direct hit by a nuclear weapon; by creating a force of missile-launching submarines, able to stay submerged and free from detection for long periods; and in the American case by adopting the 'tripod' system of deterrence — the maintenance of three virtually independent nuclear weapons systems — aircraft, land-based missiles and submarines, each theoretically capable of delivering a retalitory blow even if the other two had been destroyed in a surprise attack. (Cynics observe that this arrangement also shares the nuclear cake satisfactorily among the branches of the armed forces.)

What then has happened to shake this edifice of mutually dissuasive terror? Principally, two closely linked developments in military technology — the anti-ballistic missile (ABM) and the multiple re-entry vehicle (MRV).

The ABM is a defensive weapon designed to intercept an incoming nuclear missile and destroy it before it reaches its target. Now, by the subtle rules of the game of nuclear deterrence this comes very near to cheating; because the target in all these second-strike calculations is people.

A potential aggressor is dissuaded from nuclear attack because in the retaliatory strike his cities would be annihilated and millions of his citizens killed. Obviously, therefore, if he can devise a means of protecting them, the retaliatory strike becomes less effective and the inhibitions against nuclear aggression are correspondingly decreased. This is the first implication of the ABM.

The immediate riposte to it is the MRV. If each incoming missile is equipped with not one, but many warheads, which separate from the main rocket and fall on various targets, the ABM system can be defeated, its radars confused and its defensive capacity saturated.

And so we are back to stalemate. But are we? No, not quite; because the development of the MRV adds a new dimension to the tortuous logic of the strategic schoolmen.

It could, they say, be used to achieve a first-strike capability. That is to say, its multiple warheads might be used to attack the adversary's own offensive missiles in the adversary's own offensive missiles in their launching sites, thus depriving him in a different way of his retaliatory power.

This becomes even more plausible if accuracy can be significantly improved, and especially if this can be done by guiding each warhead separately to its target, turning MRV into MIRV, or multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicle.

If there really is reason to fear a first strike, the obvious counter-move is to mount ABMs over the missile sites — and so on in a crazy, ruinously expensive and self-perpetuating spiral.

It is possible to argue that the whole jargon-infested nightmare has no reality outside the minds of theoreticians, and that no sane political leader will ever take the appalling risks of using nuclear weapons.

But it is part of the calculations of Russian and American planners that madmen have come to power before, and that they might do so again — in the other country's capital, of course.

How far has the spiral already turned, and can it be halted and turned back? Any attempt to answer this question must begin with the SS9, Russia's giant MRV missile. American military planners, not notably immune from paranoia, have remarked in their monitoring of SS9 tests that its multiple warheads tend to fall in much the same pattern as that of the underground silos of the American Minuteman intercontinental missiles in Montana.

At the same time they have noted from their satellite reconnaissance that the Russians have begun to build ABM systems around their main cities. This, they argue, is the classic pattern for a first-strike strategy.

There's Fear of Madmen, But Always in Other Country

To the childish mind it might occur that if that is what the Russians are really up to, the way to prevent the Minuteman being destroyed in its silo is to dispense with it and rely on other means of retaliation; but this would conflict with the sacred principle of the tripod; so the American reaction has been to plan an ABM system (Safeguard) to protect its missile sites and to equip its own missiles with MIRV, designed to saturate any ABM system deployed around Russian cities.

So, the rarefied war-gaming of the strategic theorists is converted into hardware, to the satisfaction of the Chiefs of Staff and the armaments industry; and a race begins which threatens not only to disrupt the economy of both countries as weapon systems become more complicated and expensive; but also to create a situation in which one side or the other, believing that at some stage it had achieved a decisive superiority, might be tempted to end the race by an all-out attack — the familiar pre-emptive strike of the nuclear jargon.

This is the significance of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks. Realizing the appalling implications of an accelerating spiral in the arms race, the two super-powers are evidently resolved to bring it under control.

The implications are profound for the whole future of international security and not least for the people of Europe.

Some of America's European allies would like to see included in any bargain the 800 or so missiles emplaced in western Russia and aimed at targets in Europe; but the Russians would be unlikely to agree to remove them unless American nuclear weapons were taken away from Western Germany (after all the American weapons can strike at the Soviet heartland; the Russian medium-range missiles can only blow Europeans to pieces).

There is unlikely to be any bargain there. This is not to say that the Americans are negotiating over the heads of their allies — there were three separate meetings of the North Atlantic Council in July before the U.S. presented its proposals to the Russians at the Vienna talks.

The most likely outcome of the talks, planned to begin again in Helsinki on November 2, is that both sides will agree to halt the deployment of ABMs. This will not raise the delicate problem of international inspection since each side will be able to detect any cheating by satellite photography.

There will almost certainly be no agreement about MIRVs and MRVs, since an agreement on deployment would require unacceptably intrusive inspection — there is as yet no way of telling whether a missile in its silo or submarine has more than one warhead except by looking inside — and testing of MIRVs, although it can be to some extent detected by intelligence methods, is so far advanced that it is scarcely worth stopping it.

Much more likely is an agreement to limit the numbers of 'delivery systems' — aircraft, submarines and land-based missiles — a development which would go some way to alleviate American fears about the growing Russian SS9 force.

It should be possible for the super-powers to reach agreement by the spring of next year. It will be an important achievement, but no more than a first step. As Henry Kissinger went on to say ". . . the military will have to accept that, short of a nuclear holocaust, purely military decisions are no longer possible." If SALT can translate that limpid truth into a serious dialogue between the super-powers, we may yet survive the 20th century.

Draftees Sent Out to Teach

By RICHARD BOURNE
The Manchester Guardian

"The problem of a shortage of teachers is international," says Mrs. Farroukh Parsa, Iran's minister of education. Her own country has developed a novel solution, which is illustrated in a photographic exhibition in the Iranian Embassy in London.

Put simply Iran's solution is to send conscript secondary school graduates into rural villages — where regular teachers have no wish to go and the government has had no money to send them — to teach literacy and development skills. The conscripts, about 10,000 a year, spend 20 months doing this job as part of their military service.

* * *

Thanks to this education corps, devised by the Shah himself and a key element in his regime's "white revolution," it is claimed that the percentage of illiterates in Iran fell from about 80 per cent in 1962 to 50 per cent last year. Though such figures are always suspect, UNESCO has a healthy respect for the achievement and, alongside Cuba, Iran has probably had the best record on literacy in the past decade.

* * *

Mrs. Parsa, a medical doctor and for 12 years the principal of a large girls' high school in Tehran, regards the education corps as a temporary but desirable phenomenon. In the course of time, she hopes, the schools that the corps has set up with the help of villagers will produce young people who are willing to return home as teachers themselves.

In the meantime, four fifths of the corps personnel — who might not have very bright employment prospects — have volunteered to go on serving as regular teachers at the end of their military service. In this way it has been possible to extend the network of the orthodox educational system at the same time.

"Our trouble is that we have over 30,000 villages with a population of less than 250, often half a day's walk from the next and with no roads between," she explained. It bears some resemblance to the countryside of Victorian England a hundred years ago. In Iran the education corps is expected to teach both adults and children. "It is easier to teach the children — their ideas are not formed yet."

* * *

The average cost of educating someone at a school run by the corps is less than a third of that of a conventional school. At the village level the soldier-teachers are supposed to work closely with village councils and to help establish village courts.

Twenty of their schools are grouped under an education supervisor who must be a graduate of a college of education with five years' supervisory experience.

Although their enlistment is slightly different, about a fifth of the corps teachers are women. In a way their role is perhaps the most significant, for it is girls who have come off worst in education in the past. The corps explain about sanitation and birth control as well as how to drain a marsh or raise cotton output.

* * *

Mrs. Parsa has all the difficulties of education ministers everywhere — shortages of funds, shortages of science teachers, and the like. She has just overseen a rearrangement of the phases of schooling and is interested in comprehensive secondary schools aid in extending the uses of broadcasting in education. At presest Iran has an acute angled pyramid: three million in elementary schools followed by less than a million in secondary schools, with 60,000 secondary school graduates competing for three to four thousand university places.

It is at this latter point that the education corps fulfils a social need by taking up some of the frustrated would-be university entrants.

"About the high cost of loving...
...we beat part of it by buying the ring at Birks."

"Refrigerators are important. But I don't intend wearing one on my finger for the rest of my life. It's different about The Diamond. It's for a long time. Like forever and ever.

We went to Birks because we knew that's where we'd get the most diamond his hard-earned money could buy. Not something tiny for a fortune. And not something big and bright worth very little.

The one we found turned out to be less expensive than we expected. But because it was Birks, we knew we were getting exactly the quality we were paying for. (Birks now has diamonds of different qualities at prices to match each quality.)

The kind of integrity Birks has isn't square. Not when you're buying a circle to bind two lives together."

Softness in House Sales Reported Across Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Housing sales are showing signs of softness across Canada and some real estate brokers say the days of yearly increases in value are nearing an end.

Harold Dueck, president of the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards, notes home sales down 12.7 per cent during the first half of the year as compared with the corresponding period of 1969.

He says Ontario suffered the largest decline, with first-half sales 16.2 per cent lower than during the corresponding 1969 period.

Sales were slightly lower in British Columbia and the prairie provinces, with small increases in Quebec and the Maritimes.

Dueck says with interest rates for mortgages at about 10.5 per cent, "the public can no longer either the cash equity or high monthly payments necessary for home ownership."

We would like to see the high interest rates levelling off to a range of 8.5 to 9.5 per cent," he says. "But whereas there might be a slight reduction in rates during the last six months of 1970, nothing drastic in that direction will be done."

PRICE INCREASES HALT

In Toronto, home prices have stopped going up for the first time in several years.

The Toronto Real Estate Board says the average sale price of a house in Toronto has doubled in 10 years. There was a 60-per-cent increase during the past five years alone.

Realtors now suggest the pause may force re-evaluation of the escalating trend.

The Toronto board says vendors are beginning to realize "they can no longer expect an automatic increase in real estate values from year to year. Over-priced listings attract very few buyers."

The Canadian Realty News suggests in its August issue that "the price of the single-family dwelling has reached the point where even those Canadians who can afford these prices are beginning to stage a buyers' strike."

Single-family dwellings have been beyond the means of the majority of Canadian families for several years, says the publication.

The main market has been housing for upper-middle-income families, says the publication, but adds that this is becoming unattractive. "The industry now is concentrating on apartment and condominium construction."

Bids Asked On Shipyard Property

A prospective buyer of the land and assets of McKay-Cormack shipyard in James Bay has 30 days in which to make an acceptable offer to take the company out of receivership.

Receiver-manager Gordon F. McClary said there is hope the yard will be sold outright and meanwhile, negotiations have proceeded involving outside financial interests.

McClary, appointed earlier this year to settle the affairs of McKay-Cormack Ltd., said it would be preferred that bidders tender on the entire unit of lands, buildings and equipment.

The company advertised Monday that bids would be accepted in accordance with a B.C. Supreme Court order up to 1 p.m. Oct. 15 for the assets of McKay-Cormack Ltd. These consist of three parcels of land at 130 Kingston Street, plus the buildings, equipment, machinery and stock-in-trade.

In its 1968 annual report, McKay-Cormack reported fixed assets at a book value of $730,071, which represented the cost price after depreciation, except for the land value.

In 1961 the land was reappraised and given an increased value of $93,000.

Since 1968 it is likely the buildings, marine railways and equipment would have declined in value, although the real estate value may have risen.

The yard fell victim to an economic decline, particularly in ship repair and construction work, and without orders was forced to close down.

Tax Rulings Available, At a Price

OTTAWA (CP) — The national revenue department says it now is prepared to make advance rulings on individual taxpayers' tax inquiries for a minimum fee of $150.

Previously, the department would not say definitely how it would treat a business transaction or other tax question until the transaction was completed and the taxpayer submitted his annual tax return.

The new machintry is mainly of interest to tax laywers and accountants who act as consultants to major business corporations contemplating new acquisitions or other transactions.

The department's officers will also continue to give oral advice to taxpayers as well as free over-the-counter help to taxpayers at district tax offices.

Written rulings will not be given on cases similar to ones which are before the courts or on hypothetical cases.

Cases submitted for an advance ruling must be clearly stated and fully backed by documentary evidence. When rulings might require unusually long periods of time to consider and prepare, the department will charge $20 an hour for the work.

Advertising 'Overkill' Claim Denied

WINDSOR, Ont. (AP) —A leading Canadian advertising executive says he finds it "frightening" that Ron Basford, consumer and corporate affairs minister, would make "grandiose statements of advertising overkill" and that the minister "so far has come up with no new ideas."

Keith Garrett, president of the Canadian Advertising and Sales Association, made the statements in an interview commenting on a speech by Basford in Boston earlier this month before the American Marketing Association.

Basford said his department might try to control advertising volume if the industry does not impose voluntary restraints because excessive advertising leaves the consumer confused and skeptical.

"We feel that any attempt to control advertising by the means suggested by Basford could have only one result," Garrett said, "and that would be a drastic and sudden slowing down of the economy.

"The truth of the matter is that advertising expenditure is not keeping up with the gross national product."

Garrett said the GNP has increased an average of 8.9 per cent per year over the last 10 years while advertising expenditure has increased only 6.7 per cent on the average, during the same period.

Gunnar Sale To U.K. Firm Approved

TORONTO (CP) — Shareholders of Gunnar Mining Ltd. gave approval at a special meeting to sell control of the company to a British firm, Bovis Holdings Ltd.

Approval was also given to increase the company's authorized capital to 15 million shares from five million and to increase the number of directors on the company's board to 12 from seven.

Bovis has agreed to pay $9 million for Gunnar, a group of mining and construction companies.

A spokesman for Bovis said the company has extensive interests in real estate and that "where it shows a good return" Gunnar will expand into this field.

Cons. Computer

Consolidated Computer Ltd. for the six-month period ended June 30th, recorded a loss of $1.99 million as compared with a loss of $352,145 for the same period last year.

The company now has installed, or ordered more than 600 Key-Edit key stations which, combined with time-sharing hardware sales, represent a sales value of more than $6.5 million. For the six months, sales were $199,000 against $63,200.

President Mers Kutt told shareholders: "Our present accounting method may not accurately reflect our financial performance, particularly with respect to the matching of revenues and expenses."

Giant Mascot

Giant Mascot Mines Ltd. in the nine months ended June 30 raised net profit to a record $1.3 million compared with $360,000 the year before. Performance was based on production income of $4.5 million, up $2.2 million, and cost of mining and administration of $2 million against $1.5 million.

Resumption of operations at the Hope mine, where fire destroyed surface buildings last month, is expected early in 1971. Exploration and development work continues meanwhile, said president L. P. Starck.

Great Pacific

A 15 per cent improvement in per share earnings is reported by Great Pacific Industries Ltd. for the six months ended June 30; or 23 cents against 20 cents.

W. J. Sleeman said operating revenue was $3.4 million against $2.7 million, and net earnings after full income tax calculation were $230,214 compared with $177,500.

Castle Oil

Gross income rose substantially and net income fell substantially in the first half of 1970 compared with the six months ended last Sept. 30, reports Castle Oil and Gas Ltd., of Calgary.

Income counting royalties rose from $8,674 to $13,154. Adding gain on disposal of assets brought the 1969 net to $124,513, compared with $4,724 this year, when no extra gain was included.

Castle still holds interests in potential producing areas of the Arctic, in Yukon Territory and off the East coast, president B. W. Watson said.

Canadian Javelin

Vancouver Stock Exchange Friday became the second North American exchange to list the shares of Canadian Javelin Ltd., which have been traded on the American Stock Exchange.

Describing itself as one of the top 10 Canadian natural resources firms, the company said there are about 15,000 shareholders. It has holdings in many parts of the western hemisphere and in Canada is engaged chiefly in mining, petroleum and forestry.

Brascan

Net income of Brascan Ltd. for the first half of 1970 is estimated at $34.9 million or $1.65 per share. This compares with $27.9 million or $1.32 in the same period last year.

Improvement in earnings is not expected to continue at the same rate for the whole year, said president J. H. Moore.

Real Estate Development Firm Formed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A worldwide real estate development company has been formed in Vancouver by Grosvenor Estates, a major British real estate firm, and Mobil Oil Corp. of New York, the companies announced here Monday.

The Vancouver-based company, Mobil Estates Ltd., is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Mobil Oil. Grosvenor will provide real estate consulting services with the objective of joint participation in large-scale projects.

President of Mobil Estates will be Gilbert J. Hardman, former president of Grosvenor International, which is engaged in development work in British Columbia.

Hardman said tht new company will be involved in the development of "large-scale real estate in all the free world communities."

It will be concerned with development of communities, recreational areas and industrial tracts rather than with the development of individual buildings, he said.

U.S. Banks Reap Harvest On Credit Card Business

NEW YORK (AP) — If this is supposed to be a period of economic slowdown in the United States, somebody forgot to tell the bankers running credit card programs.

The number of people owning bank credit cards has skyrocketed in the last year and a half, while the dollar amount purchased with these cards has nearly doubled.

During 1969, bank credit card purchases reached an estimated $3.8 billion, an 80-per-cent increase over 1968, a Federal Reserve Board member told a congressional hearing recently. In the first quarter of 1970 bank card purchases jumped to approximately $1.1 billion, he said.

Bank Americard reported a nearly 100-per-cent increase in cardholders for the 17 months ended May 31. During a similar period ended March 31, Master Charge saw its cardholders jump about 13-fold. The two cards, which account for most of the bank credit cards outstanding, each have about 32 million clients.

The two cards are relatively new and have just begun to tap the market, industry sources explained.

Figures from Bank Americard and Interbank, a group of banks which include all Master charge card-issuing banks, show that about half the approximately 8,000 banks offering one of these two cards began doing so within the last year and a half.

Many of the banks offering charge cards are still operating in the red, industry sources said. It usually takes from three to five years before a plan becomes profitable because of high initial costs. The individual banks belonging to Interbank or Bank Americard run their own operations separately.

Trading Ban by Toronto Reduces Montreal Volume

MONTREAL (CP) — A Toronto Stock Exchange decision to prohibit its members from professional trading between Canadian exchanges is hurting volume on the Montreal exchanges, says Charles Neapole, president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges.

He told a news conference the Toronto action is bound to reduce volumes on both the Montreal and Toronto exchanges.

F. R. Whittall, chairman of the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, announced that a questionnaire is being sent to all members to "ascertain if in the opinion of members, professional trading bwtween exchanges was or was not in the public interest."

"Views may vary from one member to another but we would like to have a consensus from our members," said Whittall.

"I fail to see how the authorities in Toronto can claim that it is in the public interest not to have professional trading between exchanges in Canada and at the same time claim that it is in the public interest to have professional trading between Canadian exchanges and the New York Stock Exchange."

The Toronto rule became effective last week and has been interpreted as a retaliatory measure against a Quebec Securities Commission regulation asking brokers to trade on the Montreal market unless prices are better elsewhere.

Professional trading accounted from between 29 and 44 per cent of total volume on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges between January and August.

Arbitrage—trading of stocks to take advantage of the best price in other markets—exists in any sophisticated market in the world, said Whittall.

As price differentials develop between different markets, the professional trade will buy in one and sell in the other and vice-versa — depending on the situation. This has the effect of narrowing the spreads.

Major U.S. Bank Cuts Prime Rate to 7½%

NEW YORK (WP) — First Pennsylvania Bank of philadelphia announced Monday that its prime lending rate will be cut to 7½ per cent from 8 per cent, effective today, but the move triggered no similar steps among large banks here.

The prime rate is the interest that banks charge their biggest and best customers, virtually all large corporations. Essentially a short-term rate, it has stood at 8 per cent since last March 25, when it was lowered from the all-time record of a 8½ per cent.

First Pennsylvania, the largest bank in Philadelphia with assets of $2.5 billion, said it is cutting the rate because of "conditions in the market as well as in the company." Several smaller banks have announced prime rate cuts during the past few weeks.

Bankers here expressed surprise at the rate cut. Although conceding that short-term interest rates have been slipping lower recently, they said that loan demand has shown no slackening.

Cominco Reduces Lead Production

VANCOUVER (CP)—Cominco Ltd. has announced that its Canadian production of lead concentrates and refined lead will be reduced by about 10 per cent.

The company said the reduction was necessary because of a slowdown in the economic activity of North America and a resulting reduction in demand for refined lead in Canada and the United States.

Yielding 6.75% to maturity
Interest payable January 1 and July 1
Three months' interest payable January 1, 1971
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

and

—5 year 2½ month 7¼% bonds due December 15, 1975
Issue price: 100,00%
Yielding 7.25% for 5 years 2½ months
Exchangeable
at the option of the holder into an equal par value of 10 year 8% bonds to be dated December 15, 1975 and due December 15, 1985 yielding 8.00% for 10 years commencing December 15, 1975 and about 7.64% for the full 15 year 2½ month period commencing October 1, 1970
Interest payable December 15 and June 15
Two and one half months' interest payable December 15, 1970
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000.

The Minister of Finance reserves the right to accept or reject in whole or in part any subscription and to allot a total of $525,000,000 plus or minus up to 10%.

Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $150,000,000 of the new Bonds, open as to maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem the $450,000,000 of Government of Canada Bonds maturing October 1, 1970 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 6½% Bonds due April 1, 1972 are an addition to $115,000,000 of 6½% Bonds due April 1, 1972 and dated July 1, 1970. The new 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 are an addition to $200,000,000 of 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 and dated August 15, 1970.

The new 6½% Bonds due April 1, 1972, the new 6¾% Bonds due July 1, 1973 and the new 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 will be dated October 1, 1970 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable at any Agency of Bank of Canada. Interest is payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank without charge. Definitive bonds will be available on October 1, 1970 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to Government transfer requirements where applicable).

To enable the Government of Canada to establish six months in advance the amount to be redeemed for cash on December 15, 1975 and thus plan any required refunding, the option permitting holders to exchange their 5 year 2½ month 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 for an equal par value of 10 year 8% Bonds due December 15, 1985 may be exercised only during the six month period commencing December 15, 1974 and ending June 14, 1975.

The new Bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new Bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

Cabinet Switch Near

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet switches have been so long coming that even most of the principals seem to be getting bored with the whole thing—including Mr. Trudeau.

However, the changes appear all set now and they are not likely to be as extensive as first believed. Five ministers at the very most are expected to be involved.

The guess is that Mr. Trudeau will announce the changes late this week or early next.

The process has been delayed for various reasons but the main one appears to have been the postal situation.

Mr. Trudeau did not want to move Communications Minister Eric Kierans out of the post office portfolio while there was a chance that Parliament would have to be recalled earlier than scheduled to force compulsory arbitration of the postal dispute.

KIERANS UNWILLING

That was O.K. with Mr. Kierans, inormants say, because he didn't want to leave anyway.

And he still doesn't, they say.

By most reports, Mr. Trudeau has had to apply some persuasion to get Mr. Kierans to accept a less onerous portfolio—manpower and immigration.

Manpower Minister Alan MacEachen will, it is believed, become president of the privy council which means that he will be the new government House leader.

There have been frequent reports, none of them denied, that the current president of the privy council and House leader, Donald Macdonald, will take over the defence department.

CADIEUX TO PARIS

The present and popular defence minister, Leo Cadieux, is slated to become ambassador to France, over the strong objections of the external affairs department which likes to see such posts kept for career diplomats.

It is understood that Mr. Trudeau will not take more than one newcomer, if any, into the cabinet at this time.

Originally, it was believed he wanted to freshen up the cabinet with four or five new men from the back benches.

It now is considered likely that he will postpone such a major change until his big cabinet remaking job in preparation for the next election, due in 1972 or, less likely, in 1973.

Division Backed

MONTREAL (CP) — George Tremblay, Quebec transport minister, said Monday that the division of the transport department into four autonomous boards will increase over-all efficiency as well as improve the administration of each individual field.

Mr. Tremblay told the monthly meeting of the Trucking Association of Quebec that the reorganization of his department will begin within the next few months and will be coupled with revisions of the Highway Code.

He said the four boards to be set up within the department will cover general cartage, public transport, student bussing and dump trucks.

Each of the boards will be overseen by a judge appointed to that board for a period of 12 months.

The minister said the trucking industry in Quebec had grown to such an extent that it had become impossible to handle problems quickly because files are not divided according to category.

GIVES MORE CONTROL

"This reorganization will also give the department in general more control over tariff rulings and the issuance of permits, thus putting an end to illegal transport in Quebec."

Although concrete work on the revision of the Highway Code is not expected for a few months, Mr. Tremblay said one of the new aspects—border inspection stations—has already been initiated.

"In the last two weeks, checking trucks crossing into Quebec from Ontario and the U.S., we have already discovered 98 infractions of existing transport laws."

Most of the infractions involved permits, he said.

"Our truckers have to obtain the necessary permits when operating outside of Quebec and it is about time we started enforcing those same permit laws in our own province by putting an end to those illegal truckers.

"The times are gone when out-of-province truckers can come and go as they please, transporting almost anything without so much as a second thought to our laws."

AGATHA CHRISTIE TURNS 80

50 Years of Lucrative Murder

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Agatha Christie, whom some say has made more money out of murder than any woman since Lucrezia Borgia, celebrated her 80th birthday Monday with her 80th book—a coincidence as neat as the denouement to a Christie mystery.

In fact, Passenger to Frankfurt will be her 72nd mystery, but as her publisher notes, she also has written six non-mystery novels under the name of Mary Westmacott and a couple of non-fiction books.

The new Christie mystery, a tale of international adventure with overtones of John Buchan rather than a straight "whodunit," also marks exactly 50 years of authorship for the queen of crime fiction.

Her first thriller, The Mysterious Affair at Styles, was written during her First World War service as a voluntary nurse. She became fascinated by the colored poison bottles in the dispensary and her sister had bet she couldn't write a good detective story.

Rejected by several publishers, it finally saw print in 1920 and introduced mystery addicts to the little Belgian detective Hercule Poirot.

WROTE ONE A YEAR

She began turning out a steady book a year—sometimes two—and invented those other two celebrated Christie sleuths, Miss Marple and Mr. Parker Pyne. In 1926, she produced the book still regarded as her masterpiece, The Murder of Roger Ackroyd.

This was the first of many Christie tales to be dramatized for stage, screen and radio—a- for stage, sceen and radio—among them that phenomenon of theatre history, The Mousetrap, still pulling in audiences in London after 18 years. On Monday the curtain at the Ambassador's Theatre went up on the snowbound country-house setting for the 7,398th time.

Probably even the taxmen have lost track of her guargantuan sales. One calculation puts them at more than two billion and her earnings at something like £100,000 ($250,000) a year. Proceeds from The Mousetrap, already £100,000, go to her grandson Matthew, a 27-year-old farmer.

At 80, Agatha Christie is tall, broad and blue-eyed, not at all like her favorite among her own detectives, the gossipy, little spinster Miss Marple. An acquaintance once described her upper-class charm by saying she gives the impression of "being native to Belgravia and brought up on a good golf course."

In 1956, she was made a commander of the Order of the British Empire (CBE).

LOOKS FOR CLUES

Her second husband is the distinguished archeologist Sir Max Mallowan, whom she accompanies each spring on his excavations in the Middle East, finding "searching for clues more fascinating than laying them."

She takes about six weeks to produce a detective novel, preferring to work on wet days when the pull of the countryside is less strong. The Mallowans have two country homes in England—at Wallingford on Thames in Berkshire and a square Georgian house overlooking the River Dart in Devon as well as a London residence.

"I like to go at a new story solidly for 10 days or more," she says. "If I break off too much, I and the story turn stale."

She once said she worked out most of her plots in the bath and lists "bathing" as one of her recreations in Who's Who.

In a recent interview she rated herself "dreadfully unobservant, not like a good descriptive writer ought to be." She says she knows nothing about guns, which is why she usually kills her victims off with a blunt instrument or poison.

"I regard my work as of no importance. I've simply set out to entertain. Once I've been dead 10 years I'm sure nobody will have ever heard of me."

LOGGER FOUND DEAD AFTER 90-FOOT FALL

A 29-year old Port Renfrew logger was found dead Monday morning 90-feet below Peter Wolf Creek bridge three miles west of Jordan River.

Benjamin Edward Jack apparently fell to his death from the bridge after leaving the car he was driving following a dispute with passengers who said he was too drunk to continue.

★ ★ ★

He and his wife Nora, cousin Kenneth Jones and his wife, and two other friends, Isaac Campbell and Lillian Jones had been drinking at the Jordan River Hotel, RCMP said.

★ ★ ★

Mrs. Jack became worried when her husband still had not arrived home late Sunday and mounted a search accompanied by friends. Jack was found by grader operator Stanley Bligh of Sooke.

Sooke District Coroner Eugene Murphy was to announce today whether he will order an inquest or an inquiry.

SPEC Members Go Propane

DUNCAN — Fred Anderson of Cobble Hill has converted two Cowichan-Malahat SPEC member's cars to run on propane.

After reading about Anderson converting his 1962 Anglia to run on propane this summer, Ted Coleman of Mesachie Lake and Tino Stecca of Duncan asked him to make the change in their cars.

Coleman said: "At least if my children ask me 'What do you do about pollution?' I can say I have tried to do what I can in my own small way."

He said since his car was converted a week ago he has already noted an increase in performance.

"There is no problem in getting propane. There are four outlets in Duncan alone."

Stecca said he moved from Toronto because the east is being killed by traffic jams and new highways taking up more and more land.

"I cannot point a finger at anybody if I still use it (gasoline)," he said.

Stecca and his wife only use their car if they go outside of Duncan because they find their bicycles are so much cleaner and faster.

Pt. Alberni Paper Goes Daily

PORT ALBERNI — The Alberni Valley newspaper will become a daily at the end of September after 23 years as a weekly and semi-weekly.

The Valley Times will begin publishing five days a week (Monday to Friday) Sept. 28, managing editor Vernon Kindle said today.

The paper, with a staff of 40 full-time and 20 part-time employees, will move its offices from 2nd Avenue and Angus to new headquarters at 4th and Napier this week.

Kindle said the paper was founded in 1947 as the Twin Cities Times by Oliver D'Ami.

In 1949 it was bought by Fred Duncan, the present owner and publisher.

In 1967 the Times was amalgamated with another weekly, the West Coast Advocate, and the newspaper received its new name, The Alberni Valley Times.

Rail Strike Avoided

WASHINGTON (AP)— A partial strike against major U.S. railways was avoided for at least a week when a federal court early today issued a restraining order preventing a walkout by four big labor unions.

Although four AFL-CIO unions had called the strike against only three lines, chief railway negotiator John Hiltz had indicated the entire industry would have shut down in a retaliatory lockout.

The last-minute temporary restraining order by U.S. District Judge Howard Corcoran forbidding the 12:01 a.m. strike appeared to freeze the dispute until 1:45 p.m. Sept. 23. He set a hearing for Sept 22.

A spokesman for Canadian National Railways said an embargo on perishable goods bound for the U.S. would be enforced if the U.S. strike occurs. He said goods which could not be shipped would be stored for the strike's duration at border warehouses or at their point of shipment.

SOME WORKERS PICKETED

Despite the anti-strike order there was picketing in several cities during the post-midnight hours against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, and the Southern Pacific, the three lines singled out by the unions as strike targets.

"The carriers have demonstrated absolute inflexibility," said C. L. Dennis, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, in breaking off government-sponsored negotiations and announcing the strike plans.

Dennis said the railways had refused to budge from a one-year, seven-per-cent wage offer, compared with union demands of 40 per cent or more over three years. The workers now average about $3.50 an hour. Hiltz said the union's demands would bankrupt the industry.

Dennis was backed in the strike call by President Charles Luna of the United Transportation Union, President Harold Crotty of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Vice-President Richard Smith of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees.

Most Papers Still Cost A Dime

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most weekday newspapers in Canada cost a dime, but to meet rising costs a few major dailies have increased their prices to 15 cents and, for weekend editions, to 20 cents.

Highest price for a single edition is 25 cents for the Saturday copy of Montreal La Presse, a survey by The Canadian Press shows.

At least eight dailies now charge 20 cents for their weekend editions; The Telegram and The News in St. John's, Nfld.; Le Soleil in Quebec City; The Star and The Telegram in Toronto; Hamilton Spectactor and The Sun and The Province in Vancouver.

Several papers charge 15 cents for street sales of weekend editions, although some of them reduce the price to 10 cents for home-delivered copies.

More than 90 per cent of Canada's 113 daily newspapers cost 10 cents for weekday editions.

In Vancouver, The Sun and The Province raised their weekday price to 15 cents this spring after a three-month labor dispute. Le Soleil followed Aug. 31.

SOME COST FIVE CENTS

Three dailies still sell for five cents—the Lindsay Post and Port Hope Guide in Ontario and the Portage la Prairie, Man., Graphic. The Guide has no weekend edition.

The Truro News and Amherst News in Nova Scotia cost eight cents a copy, with Amherst's Saturday edition costing 10 cents.

A survey this year by the American Newspaper Publishers Association showed that 90.2 per cent of dailies in the United States, Canada, Bermuda, Bahamas, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands and West Indies charge 10 cents for weekday editions.

Highest-priced weekend edition is the New York Times. It costs 50 cents in the city and 75 cents in outlying areas.

AIR CARE*

It's not what you take out of the gasoline, it's what you put into the air.

Gulf's Air Care gasolines vs. low or no-lead gasolines.

To help fight pollution, cars of the future will probably be fitted with catalytic converters and/or exhaust recirculation systems—neither of which will function efficiently on leaded gasolines. So some oil companies are bringing out low-lead or no-lead gasolines.

But new cars with these emission control devices won't be on the market for a year or so yet, and taking the lead out now will reduce exhaust emissions by only a modest amount. Gulf gasolines with Air Care on the other hand can help all cars reduce harmful exhaust emissions, as well as meet the requirements of '71 models which have lower compression engines. And when automobiles do need low-lead gasolines, Gulf Canada will put theirs on the market.

Same octane ratings for Gulf's Air Care gasolines.

Taking the lead out of gasolines lowers the octane rating (and the performance for most cars except '71 models).

At Gulf, we haven't taken anything out of our gasolines. Therefore, our octane ratings stay the same, with Air Care additives in.

Gulf's Air Care gasolines mean cleaner air.

Now, both Gulf premium No-nox and Good Gulf regular gasolines contain special clean air additives that help cut harmful exhaust emissions from your car (especially carbon monoxide and unburned hydrocarbons).

Air Care additives in Gulf gasolines not only minimize exhaust emissions in new cars, they also help clean up harmful exhaust emissions from older cars by actually helping clean up dirty engines.

Better performance, mileage and longer engine life.

Air Care additives are designed to do a number of specific jobs. Like keeping carburetors and intake valves clean. And preventing corrosion and icing.

So not only do Gulf's Air Care gasolines help reduce harmful exhaust emissions, they also give longer engine life, better performance through better combustion, and improved mileage, since clean engines consume less fuel.

Low-ash Multi-G Motor Oil — the extra step.

Gulf have also brought out a new motor oil to help clear the air: new Gulfpride Multi-G. Multi-G has a special low-ash formula that gives it the lowest ash content of any premium quality motor oil on the market, as well as additives that also help reduce harmful exhaust emissions by keeping clean engines clean, and helping clean up dirty engines.

Service runs in our family.

UN President Follows Father

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Edvard Hambro of Norway, who will become president of the 25th session of the United Nations General Assembly, is a second-generation diplomat whose experience goes back to the League of Nations.

Hambro is unopposed in today's election. When he takes the chair he will be following in the footsteps of his father, the late Carl Hambro, who was the last president of the league's assembly, 1939-46.

The younger Hambro, 59, was member of the Norwegian delegation along with his father at the San Francisco conference which drafted the UN charter in 1945. He now is Norway's permanent representative at UN headquarters.

He is an experienced parliamentarian known for his firmness in handling knotty situations. He also is know as a stickler for holding to a schedule.

For this reason, UN diplomats expect him to try to get plenary meetings started on time—something rarely done by his predecessors.

One task will be to preside over the commemorative segment of the session, Oct. 14-24, when 60 to 70 heads of government or heads of state will speak.

Hambro usually approaches diplomatic problems with optimism. Even on such perennials as the Middle East he finds reason for hope.

"If you don't feel optimistic," he once said, "it's impossible to do any work in the international field."

Hambro got his first taste of international affairs as a 22-year-old law student when he received a fellowship for study at the League of Nations. Since then he has spent more than half his life away from his own country.

Although most of his adult life has been in diplomacy, he also has served in the Norwegian parliament and has held teaching posts in such widely scattered institutions as Cambridge University in England and the University of California at Berkeley.

At one time he was acting chief of the UN legal section, Later he was administrative head of the International Court of Justice in The Hague for seven years. He is author of a series, The Case Law of the International Court, and is constantly writing — hen he is not reading. He reads avidly in Norwegian, French, German and English, both the classics and modern literature.

Female Criminals Worry India Police

By RAM SUNDAR
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — Police officials in India are greatly concerned about the increasing involvement of women in crimes.

Women have figured in robberies, attacks on property, cheating cases and even in murders. Reports from several provinces indicate that more and more women are coming into conflict with the law.

A senior official of the Bombay police department said that he is "terribly distressed" that Indian women should turn criminals. "Whatever the percentage of women criminals, it is shocking for a country which has always taken a special pride in the fact that its women are tradition-bound and hence a major factor in national stability."

The official was referring to a recent report that a gang of women train robbers had been rounded up in the province of Andhra Pradesh.

For the first time, women in Bombay have been involved in pickpocketing, smuggling and black-marketing operations on a large scale. The Bombay Evening News reported the arrest of a gang of women who have been smuggling rice and other food supplies into Greater Bombay, which is a rationed area.

Bootleggers in Bombay are also using village women for transporting "snake juice" into the metropolis where liquor can be sold only on government permits.

A scholar of the University of Rajasthan is engaged in a full-scale study of Indian women in crime.

After a study of more than 750 criminal cases involving women, Dr. Rai Ahuja has expressed the view that among the major factors responsible for turning women into criminals are unhappy marriages, domestic quarrels and ill-treatment by in-laws.

He found that in three out of five cases women who resorted to crime had been married before they attained the age of 15.

In other words, "child marriages" often led to unhappiness which drove the women to desperation.

This finding has become rather controversial, since some observers of the Indian social scene have pointed out that, whatever its other drawbacks, the system of early marriages which is still prevalent in many villages contributes to emotional security.

Dr. Ahuja noted that in some cases women even killed their husbands after domestic quarrels.

Middle East History Shows Terror Works

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

In the tormented Middle East the past often mocks the present. A history riddled with terror has convinced not a few that violence works where patience fails, that ruthlessness brings results.

Hijackings and terrorization of captive passengers are perpetrated by persons professing to have lost faith in the ability or willingness of the world community to answer their complaints. But it has been so for decades. Violence has signalled other violence; terror has led to counter-terror. Often it worked, and often one side found itself mirroring the other.

Today the Arabs have armed organizations that span the political spectrum from far left to right. Some Arabs deplore the acts of their brethren, not so much because of the terror itself as because of the possible impact on world opinion.

The Jews Used Terror

A generation ago the Zionist Jews of Palestine had armed organizations spanning the political spectrum. Some exponents of violence were disciplined members of a paramilitary force, others extremists whose acts sometimes were denounced by their own brethren as damaging to the cause.

The 20th century has brought little respite from violence in the Middle East, and in today's sensitive world, with super powers armed to the teeth for overkill, each explosion tends to be more nerve-wracking than its predecessor.

Zionism echoed the dream of Jews, dispersed 1,900 years ago by the Romans and persecuted since in many countries, to return to the homeland of Saul, David and Solomon. Theodor Herzl, Zionism's prophet, said "the Jewish question . . . can be solved only by making it a political world question."

It was made that soon enough by such things as the discovery of Middle East oil riches, the growing importance of the new Suez canal and by a development which came to be referred to as "the Arab awakening."

For four centuries Arabs were under the domination of the Ottomon Empire of the Turks. Now, propaganzied by the British, they were fired with dreams of independence to follow the defeat of the Turks in the First World War. Arabs fought on the side of Britain, dured by British promises. But Britain, needing help elsewhere, also made a fateful promise to the Zionists: The Balfour Declaration of 1917. It pledged British support for a Jewish national home in Palestine, without prejudice to the rights of the resident Arabs.

Arabs Dreamed of Freedom

Given a post-war mandate by the Allied powers, ratified by the League of Nations later, Britain as the ruling power in Palestine would be constantly reminded of the promise. But what about the promises to the Arabs? Arabs never had had a state in Palestine, having for 400 years been a vilayet of the province of Syria. Now they dreamed of the sort of self-determination the victorious Allies had spoken about.

Instead of having their dreams fulfilled, the Arabs after the First World War, saw their area carved into British and French spheres of influence. In Palestine, the British had an open-door policy on Jewish immigration and the flow was heavy. Politically the Jews, with their superior education and skills, were able to organize. The Palestine Arabs, three-quarters of them rural and illiterate, were no match or the incoming Europeans.

Resentment Against British

Arabs nurtured a deep sense of injury against the British and French for the way they filled the Turkish colonial vacuum. The resentment became a raw wound when, in the mid-1930s, a British royal commission proposed partitioning Palestine into Arab and Jewish states.

The Arabs turned to terror tactics, rioting and strikes. Eventually, Britain had 20,000 troops on hand to try to contain the situation. About 1,000 Arabs, 350 Jews and 250 British personnel were killed or wounded in that period, but terror seemed to work.

In 1939, when Britain had reason to worry about affronting the Arabs in a world threatened by war, London produced a white paper. It said Palestine would be an independent state in 10 years with a Jewish minority limited to 30 per cent. Immigration would be cut off and Jewish purchase of land restricted.

It was a blow to the Zionists but, as Britain hoped, the white paper averted an Arab revolt. The outbreak of the Second World War ended the Palestine squabbling temporarily.

By 1943, it was the Zionists' turn. They began to attack the British administration. One source of anger was the British refusal to permit docking in

Moderation Did Not Pay

Jewish extremists were determined to force a change in British immigration policy. Clearly there was a widespread feeling among Zionists that moderation did not pay, that terror and violence could work. This time it would work for the Zionists.

By war's end, Jewish underground organizations which had fought alongside the Western Allies had equipped themselves with supplies of Allied arms for Haganah, a central defence militia, and for more violent elements such as Irgun Zvai Leumi and the far-out Stern Gang, all of them declared illegal by the British mandatory power.

Irgun and the Stern Gang were responsible for spectacular acts such as widespread terror attacks, raids on British military and police posts, the near-slaying of the British high commissioner, the murder of the British minister of state for the Middle East, and so forth.

Although some Jews denounced acts of terrorism, it continued unabated. Irgun openly boasted of such acts as the bombing of the King David Hotel in Jerusalem in 1946, anti-British bombings, armed robberies, night attacks on prisons, explosions which blew British soldiers to bits.

But again, terrorism seemed to be getting results. Britain's new post-war Labor government was under severe pressure from the United States and world Zionism to ease the immigration policy. The wartime Hitler massacre of the Jews had built up widespread sympathy for Zionism.

Soon Britain was asking the United Nations to consider the question. A UN committee, drawing heavily from the British proposal of just a decade before, proposed partition. In November, 1947, the General Assembly voted a majority plan for partition into Jewish and Arab states, with international enclaves for Jerusalem and Bethlehem. The Jews supported the plan, the Arabs denounced it, along with most of the underdeveloped Asian-African world. The Arabs said any attempt to set up a Jewish state would be resisted by force.

In effect, the Arab-Israeli war began then. By the turn of the year, Arabs had invaded from surrounding states, inflicting heavy casualties on Jewish settlements. Britain, frustrated by inability to counter all the violence, announced plans to surrender mandatory power May 15, instead of Aug. 1, as scheduled under the UN plan.

THE CORPORATION OF THE DISTRICT OF OAK BAY

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING ON AN AMENDMENT TO THE ZONING BY-LAW

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem themselves affected by the provisions of the proposed "Fourteenth Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1970," being By-law No. 2785 of The Corporation of the District of Oak Bay, will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council on the matters contained therein at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., on Monday, September 21, 1970, commencing at 7:30 p.m. The proposed By-law:

(i) Amends the present regulations pertaining to the keeping on lots in residential zones, on which there are residences, of unlicensed vehicles, boats, trailers, camp trailers and camper bodies, and in particular provides that such items not in a garage or carport may be sited only in the rear yard or side yard behind the front line of the principle building and shall be screened. Provision has been made in the By-law for the keeping in the front yard of any of these objects, owned on or before the date of the passing of this By-law, and registered with the Building Inspector within thirty days after the passing thereof, where it is impractical to get any of them into the rear or side yards because of the natural topography of the lot or because of the siting of the dwelling on the lot. A greater number of currently licensed motor-vehicles than there are licensed drivers residing on the premises may not be kept thereon in the front yard except such as may be in a garage or carport.

(ii) Provides that a lot on which there is no residence shall not be used so as to entail the keeping thereon of more than a total of two of the above objects. Such objects shall be screened according to the provisions of the By-law.

(iii) Defines a "Commercial Vehicle" and provides that such vehicles in residential zones shall be kept in either a carport or a garage.

Copies of the proposed By-law may be inspected on the Notice Boards at the Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., at any time.

E. H. Hart,
Municipal Clerk.

From Monday until Thursday, inclusive, ferries will leave Swartz Bay (Victoria) at 7, 9, 10 and 11 a.m. 1, 2, 3, 5, 7 and 9 p.m. Sailings from Tsawwassen will be at 9 and 11 a.m., noon, 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 p.m. Additional sailings on Thursdays will leave Swartz Bay at 4 and 8 p.m. and Tswwassen, 6 and 10 p.m.

Friday will see hourly sailings from both terminals from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

There will be hourly sailings from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. from both terminals Saturdays. Swartz Bay sailings from that time will be at 4, 5, 7, 8 and 9 p.m. and at Tsawwassen, 5, 6, 7, 9 and 10 p.m.

Hourly sailings from 3 to 10 p.m. will be held from both terminals on Sundays. Until that time sailings from Swartz Bay are scheduled for 7, 8, 9 and 11 a.m. noon and 1 p.m. Morning schedules for Tsawwassen are 7, 9, 10 and 11 a.m. There will also be ferries at 1 and 2 p.m.

The fall schedules will remain in effect until Nov. 30.

The Black Ball ferry MV Coho also begins her winter schedule Monday, leaving daily from Victoria at 10 a.m. and 4:45 p.m.

The Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite's last Seattle-Victoria run for the season is slated for Sept. 26.

The Washington State Ferries began their fall schedules Wednesday with daily sailings from Sidney to Anacortes set for 11 a.m. and 5:15 p.m. Winter sailings begin Oct. 1 with a ferry leaving daily from Sidney at 12:30 p.m.

Nixon Holds Up PWA Runs

President Nixon has been too busy to cut the final red tape fetter to allow Victoria-Seattle scheduled flights by Pacific Western Airlines.

Lacking his signature on U.S. authority for a change in carrier, PWA was unable to take over service today from Air Canada, which pioneered the international route before the Second World War.

A PWA spokesman said the company could not inaugurate services without the president's signature, despite earlier sanction by Canadian and U.S. civil air authorities.

Meanwhile, Air Canada carries on its Viscount service on a day-to-day basis.

Pacific Western did open its downtown ticket sales office today, however, at 690 Broughton, opposite St. Andrew's Church.

In co-operation with Air Canada, express, freight and aircraft ground handling services for PWA are being arranged through the national carrier's existing facilities.

PWA and Air Canada are sharing Victoria-mainland flights in accordance with national air policy.

LOCAL SHIP MOVEMENTS

NAVY

St. Croix, Yukon and Rainbow at sea, returning Sept. 22; Endeavour at sea, returning Sept. 26; Laymore at sea, return date not listed; Chaudiere at sea, returning Sept. 17; Miramichi at sea, returning Sept. 18; all other ships in port.

Repairs Started On Fountain

Repairs began this week on Victoria's Centennial Square fountain, whose lights short-circuited almost two years ago and have been blacked out ever since.

Replacement of the faulty flashing light system will cost the city $12,600, almost half the entire fountain's original cost of $30,000. The breakdown was attributed to poor materials.

The fountain was a gift marking Victoria's 100th birthday, donated by Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Saanich municipalities.

Work on the drained pool is being carried out behind a wooden barricade by Hume and Rumble, a Vancouver electrical contracting firm.

The job is expected to be completed by Sept. 30.

Repairs include replacing the lighting fixtures, automatic switches and an electrical panel.

Oak Bay Alderman Dies at 59

Alexander Hendry, a community-spirited man and Oak Bay alderman who spent five years on the municipality's council, died at Royal Jubilee Hospital Monday night after a lengthy illness. He was 59.

In spite of his illness, Hendry had attended council meetings up until two days before his final entry into hospital and maintained his position as sales manager and secretary of the Victoria Plywood Ltd.

Acting mayor, Ald. Ian Horne, today ordered the municipal hall's flag to be flown at half staff in Hendry's memory. It will again be flown at half staff Friday when funeral services will take place at McCall's Chapel at 2:15 p.m. Canon Hywel J. Jones will officiate.

Born in England, Alex Hendry came to Canada some 55 years ago, graduating with honors from the University of British Columbia.

In his 24 years as a Victoria resident, he made his mark in both municipal and community life.

He served as councillor and alderman in 1963, 1964, 1968, 1969 and 1970, heading major committees, including zoning, lands and building and personnel.

HELPED SCOUTS

For several years he served as treasurer and president of the local branch of the Boy Scouts of Canada, was a director of the Queen Alexandra Solarium and of the Royal Jubilee Hospital. He was also a director of the John Howard Society and a member of the Gyro Club.

An ardent golfer, Hendry served as director and vice-president of the B.C. Golf Association, being a member of the Victoria Golf Club and an honorary member of the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

He is survived by his wife, Grace, of 3253 Henderson; his mother, Mrs. Ethel Hendry, and sister, Margaret, both of Vancouver; and a brother, Noel, of Asbestos, Que.

Vote Set for Oct. 9 On Proposed College

The Greater Victoria school board at a special meeting Monday set Oct. 9 as the date for the plebiscite on the establishment of a college.

* * *

They also approved in principle the appointment of a public relations consultant to promote the concept of a college.

Education Minister Donald Brothers last week authorized the board to hold a plebiscite to decide whether a college should be established.

The board had been negotiating with the government since 1966 for permission to hold a vote.

If the vote is successful the trustees intend classes to begin at the present Institute of Adult Studies in September 1971. This was a reason for setting the date in October rather than in December with the slated civic elections.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore said, in proposing Oct. 9, the appointment of a college council and a principal as well as the establishment of curriculum had to be done if the college was to open next September.

Consulting fees will be $150 a day plus expenses, with a 10-day maximum on the term of the consultant's employment.

* * *

The college is to offer academic courses for the first two years of university and the trustees hope to combine it with the present institute to offer technical, vocational and business career programs.

The trustees selected the name, Juan de Fuca, by vote from a list that included Thunderbird, Quadra, Haida, Camosun, Amor de Cosmos and Victoria College.

Hospitals, Engineers Nearer

A contract settlement between the International Union of Operating Engineers and 28 strike-threatened B.C. hospitals moved a major step nearer Monday.

The union's negotiating committee announced it is recommending acceptance of a tentative contract worked out by government mediator Ed Sims.

The union has been negotiating for four months with the B.C. Hospitals' Association and the association's labor relations council will meet next week to consider the mediator's formula and make a recommendation.

The union said the formula includes arbitration of some wages in dispute between the four locals involved and the hospitals.

Sims' term has been extended to Oct. 8 so bargaining could continue if necessary.

Plastered Man Spied Carrying Plaster Lady

Perhaps it was love at first sight, or maybe it was only a passing fancy.

Nobody knows for sure, least of all Vincent Barone, what attraction he found for the plaster of Paris lady riding a dolphin that adorned the hallway of an apartment block at 639 Constance.

The 33-year-old Nova Scotia serviceman, stationed for one month in the Victoria area with navy air crews, appeared in provincial court this morning charged with theft under $50 and possession of stolen property.

Judge William Ostler was told Barone was arrested by Esquimalt police at 1:45 a.m. this morning following a complaint from Lewis Fortier, a tenant at 639 Constance.

* * *

He had been drinking, police said.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge of theft because he said he could not remember anything of stealing the statue.

"But I do remember having about a thousand pounds of statue on my back," he told Ostler and pleaded guilty to the charge of possession of stolen property.

* * *

"I suppose you don't know what you were going to do with it?" Ostler asked.

"Had you been drinking at some place nearby?"

"I don't even know the neighborhood," Barone replied, "I know I had been drinking."

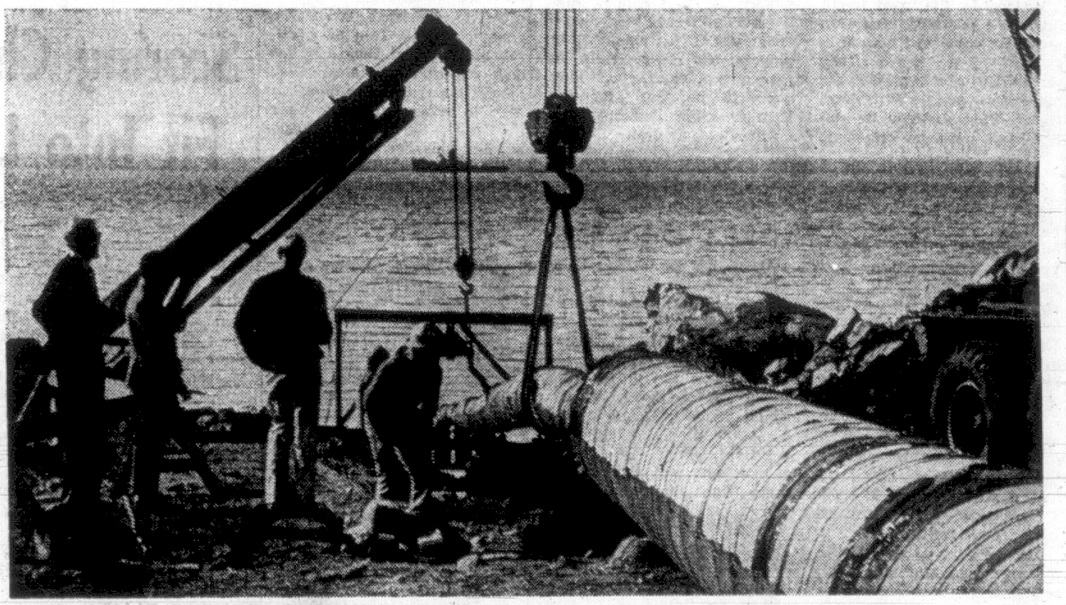
Ostler asked Barone if he wished to call his divisional officer, who was in court, as a character witness. Barone declined. Ostler asked again. Barone refused.

"I think it is a case for a nominal penalty," said Ostler in fining Barone $50.

"It's too absurd . . ."

THE GREAT SEWER ESCAPADE

Ratzlaff, If Anybody, Knows How to Lay 6,100 Feet of Pipe



The Sudbury II Monitors the Operation Offshore

BY PETER McNELLY

Bernie Ratzlaff clambered atop the rusty skeleton of what looked like a rigging for children's swings and surveyed the blasted gulch by the shore of Macaulay Point.

Ratzlaff, Charlie Archibald and Bill Poole, all contractors, had won a $494,000 job from the Capital Regional District Board to build the extended sewage outfall from Macaulay Point 6,100 feet into Juan de Fuca Strait.

Four 1,500-foot sections of the 36-inch-diameter concrete must be welded together, pushed to sea and sunk in 200 feet of water. The operation is taking all week.

Ivy-league sweater, blue jeans, cowboy boots and tipped cigar, Ratzlaff looked the essence of confidence and control. It was Sunday afternoon.

Saturday, there had been an unexpected brush fire which damaged 342 feet of pipe. Ratzlaff made a few calls, assured everyone that everything would be all right. By Monday the pipe had been replaced.

On Monday another hassle turned the three-day operation into an entire week's job. The tug, Island Monarch, which was supposed to look after the marine end of the job, proved to be too small.

Sudbury II had to be called in and delay cost at least a day—assuming good weather lasts.

Ratzlaff does not like to waste time. Sunday he was still hashing out details.

"Can you get me that plate? Can you get it today?" he was saying.

"Well, I need it as soon as you can get it. I've got my own welders, you get it for me today, and my men will weld it. Can you get it today?"

"Yes."

"OK, that's fine. We'll take care of the rest." Ratzlaff climbed off the bars to check out other details. Archibald started to explain the week's operation which began Monday morning.

We talked for an hour or so, examining drawings, walking along the site. Overhead, seagulls combed the polluted shoreline.

Rather Than Gush Out Guck Will Disperse Through Small Portholes

Archibald pointed to a V-joint at the end of one pipe. He said it was a pig valve, one opening of which would remain sealed underwater while the other fed to more pipe.

If the pipes should ever become clogged with sludge, he said, a diver could descend, open the valve and insert a cleaning roto-device to clear the pipe again.

At the outermost length of the pipe, the size begins to decrease from the standard 36-inch diameter to an eventual 16-inch diameter.

At the point where the pipe begins to get smaller, a number of small portholes have been bored. These diffusing ports, as Archibald called them, are spaced along the pipe until they reach the end. On Sunday, they were capped. They are opened Friday to sink the pipe.

This is the end which will rest in the deepest part of the water, about 200 feet down. The sewage will disperse through the ports rather than gush madly out one end.

The idea is to make the flow less concentrated as it breaks into the water.

Regional district engineer Bill Gerry said the effluent will form an oblong spherical shape as it emerges from the pipe.

By Monday afternoon, several side-boom cranes had sidled up to the first 1,500-foot section, the one with the watertight nose cone. Rollers had replaced the holding blocks under the pipe. The front end was already 200 feet into the water.

The plate Ratzlaff had been calling for had been delivered and welded to the bars. Attached to the plate was a steel yellow claw gripping two wheels about the size of truck tires.

Inside the claw, resting on the wheels, was the pipe. Each section feeds through this device on its way to the sea bed.

Out in the strait, Island Tug and Barge Ltd.'s tug Island Monarch was anchored in position. Under the direction of Capt. Roy Blake, she was to have remained positioned at 6,400 feet offshore during the entire operation.

But the 157-foot vessle was too small for this job. Ratzlaff and Archibald didn't know this until Monday afternoon.

By Tuesday, Sudbury II, the largest tug on the Pacific coast, perhaps the world, was getting set in the Island Monarch's place. Blake remains in control of marine operations throughout the week and Capt. John Webb is aboard Sudbury II.

Her role is to guide the pipe and keep it in line. The pipe is not towed to sea, but pushed along the rollers from behind by a tractor.

The nose cone of the lead pipe is hooked by a nylon rope to a winch on the Sudbury II. Though the pipe is flexible enough to sway several hundred feet off course without kinking or breaking, the rope keeps it straight and reduces the risk of excess stress.

Once on the bottom, the pipe has no stress at all. Only the floating and lowering part present real difficulties.

The pipe is concrete which has been protected from corrosion by a tar, fiberglass and felt paper coating. A peg board-like covering has been lashed to the underside of the pipe for further protection.

Two wires also run on the outside of the pipe as part of an electric battery hookup also designed to prevent corrosion. One wire is connected to the pipe at various places. The other runs away from the pipe to units called anode beds.

The idea is to run a low-grade current from the pipe to the anode beds. Somehow — you have to understand basic electricity to get this — the current prevents the pipe from corroding by switching the process to the anode beds.

But this trick doesn't match the space-age being used to keep the pipe in line. A laser beam is shot from the shore to a sheet of plywood on a barge near the Sudbury II. This beam directly matches the proper course of the pipe.

If the laser fails, a large searchlight can be used. And if that doesn't work, Sudbury II can monitor the course with radar.

Monday afternoon, Archibald was trying to contact the marine division of the RCMP. Another problem. They needed some patrol vessels to keep fishing boats out of the area. If one accidentally slashed the nylon rope attached to the Island Monarch, the delay could be time-consuming and expensive.

Archibald said the first section would be pushed to sea as soon as the patrol was established. The next section would be lifted on to the rollers that the first had left, and them moved up to the rear of the first.

The two are welded together, then pushed further to sea. This process is repeated until each of the four sections is joined. By that time, the pipe stretches nearly to the Sudbury II.

They'll Be Using a Laser Beam, Even Radar, to Finish Job

As the pipe is welded and pushed into the water, 11 barges assume positions along side. Nine of these carry powered cranes with a cradle, a device which loops over the pipe with rollers underneath.

The diffusing ports are opened once all the pipe is at sea. Even though the pipe is concrete, it floats because of the air inside.

When the diffusing ports are opened on Friday and the pipe is no longer watertight, the barges begin to lower the pipe toward the sea bed.

The barge closest to the Sudbury II slowly drops the "nose cone" end below the surface. This operation progresses in stages, each barge dropping its share of pipe in calculated amounts.

The barge farthest from shore lowers the pipe the deepest distance. Each other barge lowers the pipe a lesser amount in proportion to the first.

While this is going on, a series of soundings is taken to guarantee that the cradle on the last barge never quite hits bottom.

Archibald says that the barges automatically float back to shore as the pipe is lowered. Lashed together, they return to shore at a controlled rate.

"Even my men don't believe me, so I don't expect you to. But the barges will move to the shore because the angle of the pipe will push them. The only problem here is to make sure they don't move too fast," Archibald said.

The sea bed is mostly sand and silt until the last 100 yards from shore. At 800 feet out, the pipe is laid on a gravel bed which reaches to land.

After the laying operation is completed, the last 800 feet is covered with two feet of gravel and a layer of rock.

A bypass pipe will be connected to a pumping station on shore later this year. Gerry says the station will be finished by January, and the first tests of the system will begin then.

The outfall will serve domestic users from Esquimalt, most of Saanich, part of Victoria south of Saanich, land north of the Gorge, federal properties in Esquimalt and Victoria and the Songhees and Esquimalt Indian reserves.

More than 20 men are involved in the job.

What happens if high winds or a storm occur before the pipe is paid?

"In that case, we just pray," says Archibald.

BILL WALKER

The Lions in review, or for a guy who doesn't want to play football in Canada, Vic Washington did much better than all right against Winnipeg at Empire Stadium on Sunday.

But where do the Lions go from there?

Coach Jackie Parker used the controversial ex-Ottawa star against both their wishes, it was reported earlier, but quickly denied (probably in the interests of club harmony).

Not because Parker doubted Washington's talents, but because he didn't feel it was completely fair to some of the players that Washington play when he hadn't even scrimmaged at anytime this season.

But he did, and Washington performed well enough that there may be good reason to suggest that he will play even better the next time.

And if he does, it will be great for the Lions, because their backfield will then consist of Jim Evenson, A. D. Whitfield and Jim Young, with Washington at flanker. That's a pretty potent foursome which quarterback Paul Brothers could call on, although Sunday's events did not produce anything particularly outstanding.

There probably was good reason. The question was: How to use Washington? And when? And the Lion attack obviously stuttered because of this indecision, noticeably at the start of the game.

The Bombers were just as obviously waiting for any move to Washington and did interecept two passes sent his way. And Brothers was not sharp, either. None of which helped the cause.

Nervousness? Perhaps, because the Lions could very easily have been had by Winnipeg. They failed to finish off a number of plays properly, and their blocking left much to be desired.

It was only when they were stung by Winnipeg's second touchdown that they displayed any semblance of team play and power running which is their trademark, and must be if they are to succeed.

But now, what does Washington do?

Nobody really knows, or didn't on Sunday.

●

He can't leave for the NFL and a new career as he wanted to. He knew that when he stepped on the field Sunday. And if he didn't play as well as he could have, it was hard to notice from the sidelines. Because he did run his patterns well, and he did not dog it when he was not the prime receiver. He made his fakes as he had been taught to do, and he even threw a couple of key blocks.

"He showed me something," said Parker in a moment of rare acolaim.

And when Washington made that kickoff return he made it as if he meant to be a real member of the Lions, not a reluctant one. The only reason he didn't go all the way, was because he was tired.

Meanwhile, the word is out that the Lions have made an attractive offer to Evenson to stay in B.C. next season. They should. Evenson is playing out his option, and is Pittsburgh bound. This summer he suffered an appendectomy and did not play in the first Lion game, which created a bit of a fuss. There was a difference of opinion between him and management. However, when he did play, he was the charging Evenson of old and has been literally playing his backside off for the club and his option with it.

All of which helped create the problem surrounding Washington. Would he play his backside off for the club, too? And if not, would the Lion players resent it?

You can bet your bottom dollar they would, and wouldn't play as well, either. This is what disturbed Parker. He had a successful team, but more important a happy one. His relationship with his players was excellent.

And he wasn't about to disturb it, if possible. And Washington's case might have done just that. Certainly the players had every right to their own opinions, and if they were to be "up" for the Bomber game, it didn't show on the field, at first.

But now, in retrospect, perhaps they can see the other signs, the dollar signs, if you like. Because the place and the people in it were ready to jump. It was the fourth biggest crowd ever. They didn't particularly come to see Winnipeg, which now is all but finished for the year with a 1-and-7-record.

Their cheers told why they were there.

Vic Washington. He was the new image. The fans had bought it, wanted him to know it, and were asking him to stick around for a while.

Vic probably got the message loud and clear. All great players have a natural amount of ego. It goes with their make-up. They have to. Washington showed some of this on Sunday.

Meanwhile, Evenson got the yards, as he alsways does. He got 130 in 20 carries which carried him by George Reed of Saskatchewan. He has a game in hand. And if he doesn't get a new contract, he at least deserves a bonus. Right now.

For he is the player who really makes the Lions go, which the crowd forgot. And he is the player, along with Whitfield and Young, of course, who will undoubtedly make Washington that much more valuable.

Especially, if he sees fit to play, as he can, and all the time, too.

Defence Plays Key Role, Makes Pitching Stand Up

By The Associated Press

Defence, says Gil Hodges, could be the name of the game in the final stages of the National League's East Division title countdown.

To prove his point, New York Mets keep digging in, holding the line and scooping up everyone else's fumbles.

"Our defence has picked up so much in recent games," the Mets' manager said before Monday night's game against Montreal Expos.

Then the Mets backed Danny Frisella's solid relief pitching with airtight play in the field before capitalizing on a Montreal defensive breakdown for four unearned runs in the 10th inning and a 9-5 victory that sent them into a virtual first-place deadlock with idle Pittsburgh Pirates.

New York trails the Pirates by less than one percentage point, with the third-place Chicago Cubs, who also had the day off, one game off the pace.

DODGERS DOWN PADRES

Los Angeles Dodgers snapped San Diego Padres' five-game winning string 12-4 and San Francisco Giants outlasted Atlanta Braves 7-5 in the only other games played Monday night.

New York fell behind the Expos 4-0 as rookie Clyde Mashore ripped a two-run homer off Ray Sadecki in the second inning for his first major league hit, and then singled in the fourth to ignite another two-run flurry.

Three walks, three singles and an error by third baseman Coco Laboy gave the Mets five runs in the fifth, but the Expos tied it against Frisella in the bottom of the inning on a walk, Mack Jones's pinch double and a sacrifice fly by Bobby Wine.

Jones's bloop double was the only hit off Frisella, who retired the last 15 batters he faced before leaving for a pinch hitter in the 10th.

Jerry Grote started the Mets winning rally with a single, and pinch-runner Rod Gaspar stole second. He took third as first baseman Ron Fairly booted Bud Harrelson's bunt, then was trapped in a rundown on Tommie Agee's tap to third. But catcher John Bateman's throw hit Gaspar in the hand, and he came on to score the tie-breaking run.

EVEN SERIES

Wayne Garrett's run-scoring double, a walk, Ron Swoboda's sacrifice fly and Donn Clendenon's run-producing single completed the rally, enabling the Mets to square their season series against the last-place Expos at eight victories apiece.

The Dodgers softened up San Diego with a six-run salvo in the first inning and coasted home as Wes Parker drove in three more runs with a single and double.

Frank Johnson, a mid-game replacement for ailing Willie McCovey, lined a two-run single off knuckleballer phil Niekro in the sixth, keying a four-run rally that carried the Giants past the Braves.

Athans Third In Ski Meet

TEQUESQUITENGO (AP) — Two members of the United States team, Liz Allan and Mike Sayderehud, won individual aggregate titles in the fourth American water ski championships at this Mexican lake.

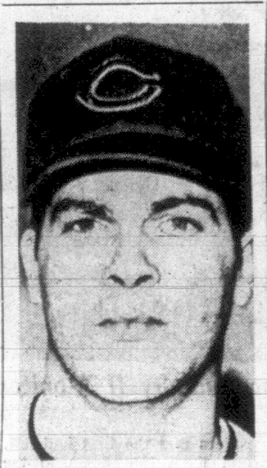
George Athans, the Canadian star from Kelowna, won the figures event and finished third overall in the men's competition.

Miss Allan had a total of 2,875 points in winning the women's overall championship.

Sayderehud had 2,897 points, compared with 2,685 for second-place Wyne Grimditch of the U.S. and 2,625 for Athans.

Sayderehud was first in the slalom, second in figures and first in jumping.

Cristy Lyn-Weir of the U.S. and Linda Bocock of Quebec were second and third in the women's competition.



RELEASED from hospital today after treatment for concussion and head wound was Cleveland Indians' pitcher Sam McDowell. It took seven stitches to close wound McDowell received when he was attacked and robbed by three men on downtown Cleveland street Sunday night. He is expected to pitch for Indians Thursday.

Scoring Champ Didn't Fit Into Laker Plans

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peterborough Lakers arrived here Monday minus eastern scoring champion Gaylord Powless, but coach Bobby Allan was quick to point out that the loss of Powless would not hurt the club's chances in the Canadian senior lacrosse final.

Powless, who topped all eastern scorers this lear with 158 points, was one of three players Allan recruited for the Mann Cup final but he did not arrive here with the Lakers.

"He just didn't fit into our plans," said Allan when asked about the absence of Powless.

"It was a last-minute thing. I'd rather not say anything more about it."

ANOTHER PLAYER

Allan said he will bring in a player from another eastern team in time for tonight's opening game in the best-of-seven national final against New Westminster Salmonbellies.

"We have a couple of players in mind," said Allan, "but we want to talk it over first."

Second game will be played Thursday with the third Saturday and the fourth Monday, Sept. 21. Other games, if necessary, are scheduled Sept. 22-24-26.

All games will be played at 5,500-seat Queen's Park Arena in New Westminster.

Peterborough and New Westminster met in the National Professional Lacrosse final last year with the Lakers winning a classic seven-game series. The pro leagues have since disbanded with the teams now back in the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association.

The two other players Peterborough picked up for the Mann Cup, forwards Jim Higgs of Huntsville and Chuck Li of Brooklyn, are both expected to see action in the opener.

Allan said he plans to use Higgs, a three-time winner of the most-valuable-player award in the national junior final, with Cy Coombs and John Davis of the Lakers' top forward line.

Allan, who will go with veteran Pat Baker in goal for the first game with Wayne Platt in a backup role, put the Lakers through a light workout Monday night.

"I'm not too worried about our layoff because we've been practicing regularly," added Allan, whose Lakers finished one point behind the Powless-led Brantford club in league play.

Cramer, Cairns Top Heal's Shoot

Jack Cramer of the Vancouver Seaforth Highlanders topped the match rifle division and LS C. Cairns of HMCS Malahat in Victoria nailed down the top FN rifle award in the 22nd annual Pacific Command Rifle Association meet at Heal's Range over the weekend.

Cramer won the "allcomers' aggregate" with a total score of 482 out of 500 in three matches—Little (third with 144-16x), Montague-Bridgeman (first master with 120-15x) and Malahat (third with 218-28x).

Cairns won the second-stage Lieutenant-Governor's match with a score of 200 out of 225.

This match was a shootoff among the top riflemen from the PCRA aggregate, won by LS E. Norman of HMCS Malahat with a total of 237.

Other individual winners were Derek Daines of Westminster Regiment (Little match); Bev Pinney of Haney (Montague-Bridgeman match); Phil Watt of Fifth Field Battery, Victoria (Malahat match); I. McEwan of Parksville (B.C. Rifle Association aggregate); Don Bullock of Vancouver Seaforth Highlanders (Close-range aggregate); Cpl. K. Pringle of PPCLI, Esquimalt (Little and Taylor match); Cpl. R. MacKenzie of 407 Command Squadron, Nanaimo (first-stage Lieutenant-Governor's match) and Tom Sylvester of PPCLI Cadets, Victoria (Cadet aggregate).

Approximately 80 shooters attended the two-day meet which ended Sunday.

Out For Season

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Expos announced Monday that John Boccabella will be sidelined for the rest of the 1970 National League baseball season.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Light Winds Plague Sailors

Light elusive airs and a strong flood tide played havoc Sunday when 32 yachts paced it out in the third anual Thermopylae Race.

Only 24 boats completed the course in the time limit. Several had to drop anchor off Clover Point to prevent being pushed back toward Trial Island.

The first two boars over the finish line and first and second place winners on corrected time were Bob Grundison's Owl and George Dufour's Galenaia II.

Thrid-place finisher was Jack Woodward's Puff who came fourth over the line but beat out John Malleson's Sunday on corrected time.

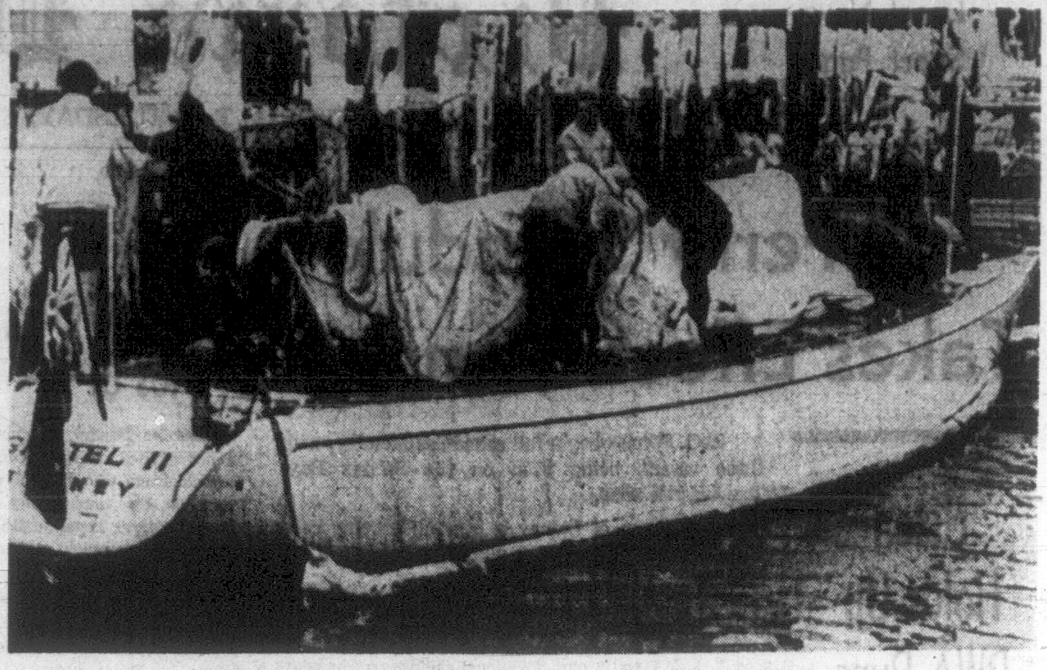
After Melee came Ian Stewart's Ahoo-Ya, Fred Gardiner's Chi-Yen, Archie Campbell's Ligero, Doug Turnham's Barracuda II, Cliff Woodcock's Cambria, Don McGowns Haida III, Greg Oliver's T'Weather, Ned Ashe's Mint, Tom Loney's Hammerhead, Glen Higgins' Happy Hour, Brian Saunders' Impulse, Hohn Dewey's Swallow, Den Perry's Tahola, Roger Davidson's Pahquee, Gordie Nickells' Redskin, Gerry Stinson's Twalani I, Frank Rhodes' Rampage, Walter Boyes' Baht'at and Dave Carere's Chinook.

The same weather conditons in waters off Sidney Sunday also caused casualties when only seven out of 19 boats competing in the Canoe Bay Sailing Club's first race of the fall season finished.

One of these was Jack Smith's eight-metre Reality. He was the only competitor in the A and B Division and sailed the five-mile course single-handed.

Gordie Inglis' Saltshaker won the C and D Division, being followed by Dave Taylor's Achates, Dick Fisher's Rawson 26, Alec Marshall's Wisp, Merv Britten's Piranha II and Jim Scott's Vacalindo.



NIGHT BEFORE THE 'BIG DAY'

While one crewman aboard Gretel II adjusts flexible plastic fender around the Australian challenger for the America's Cup at Newport Monday evening, others work on the mainsail following a day of sailing drills. Fender was removed today when Aussie 12-metre yacht hoists sails to meet U.S. defender Intrepid in first race of best-of-seven series. (AP Wirephoto)

RAIN, COOL WEATHER . . . . . . AS CUP SERIES STARTS

Aussies Know the Course

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Yachting's World Series started today under predicted weather conditions that may make them all wish they were water skiing in the Bahamas.

Rain and cool northeasterly weather blew over the America's Cup course off shore Monday and similar conditions are predicted for the 21st defence of sport's oldest monopoly, the American retention of the trophy they have held since 1851.

After three years of designing, planning, recruiting and tuning, Intrepid of the New York Yacht Club will face Australia's Gretel II of the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron in the best-of-seven race series.

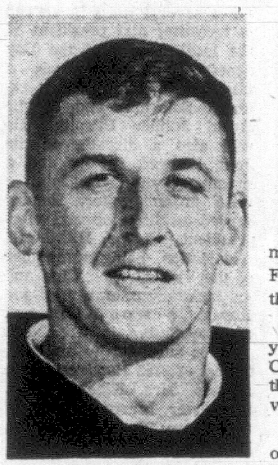
Intrepid is the favorite with 43-year-old Californian architect Bill Ficker at the helm.

The Australian challenger, however, represents knowledge gained by two prior Aussie efforts at the cup. They are no strangers to the course over Rhode Island Sound, a combination of two tidal currents plus the prevailing ocean swells.

Nor are they strangers to the sophisticated metals and shaped timbers that go into the 12-metre sloops that are the current standard bearers for the cup competition.

Going for the Americans is an unbroken winning tradition. No American defender has ever lost a cup challenge and no challenger has ever won more than two races in a given series. Intrepid is a proven winner, having decisively defeated another Australian challenger, Dame Pattie, 4-0, in 1967.

Gretel II, designed by Alan Payne—who also designed the original Australian challenger, Gretel, in 1962—is something of a cipher. She readily beat France, a French challenger, in an elimination series.



TED GERELA

Eastern Point Race Tight; 'Old Boys' on Top in West

By The Canadian Press

Chances are they're selling more programs in the Eastern Football Conference this year than they are out West.

The same old guard from last year dominates the Western Conference scoring again so far this year — but things are vastly different in the East.

Of the 18 top WFC scorers, only one is a rookie — Hugh McKinnis, Calgary Stampeders' southpaw back from Arizona State — and he comes halfway down the list, with 24 points on four touchdowns.

Ted Gerela of British Columbia Lions leads the parade again with 75 points on 17 converts, 16 field goals and 10 singles. Two more kickers — Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan Roughriders and Dave Cutler of Edmonton Eskimos — follow with 60 and 50 points respectively.

In the EFC, it's last year's scoring champion — Tommy Joe Coffey of Hamilton Tiger-Cats — up on top with 53 points on three touchdowns, 11 converts, seven field goals and three singles.

Then come the rookies. Ivan MacMillan, 18-year-old from Alexandria, Ont., is a single point behind Coffey.

'OLD' ROOKIE FOURTH

Don Jonas, quarterback for Toronto Argonauts and at 27 a rookie only insofar as the CFL is concerned, is in fourth place with 41 points, one behind Oldham. Jonas came out of Penn State and was a standout with Orlando Panthers of the Continental League before moving north.

Then came five holdovers — Bill Symons of Toronto, Terry Evanshen of Montreal Alouettes, Sonny Wade of Montreal, Jim Thorpe of Toronto and Dennis Duncan of Montreal.

Terry Wellesley, 21, a Belleville, Ont., product of Tennessee Tech, now with Ottawa Rough Riders, follows with Gary Wood of Ottawa, the Cornell University quarterback who was backup to Fran Tarkenton with the New York Giants of the National League.

Other names new to the CFL in the scoring parade are Tony Moro and Tom Bland, both with Toronto.

Symons is the leading rusher in the EFC and Jim Evenson of B.C. heads the rushing in the West. Thorpe in the East and Terry Swarn of Edmonton in the West lead the pass receiving.

Wood and Jonas, although their percentages differ, each has 11 touchdowns passing to lead the EFC while their WFC counterparts are Jerry Keeling of Calgary and Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan, with 14 and 11 respectively.

BUCS BOLSTER MOUND CORPS

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates, looking for more pitching strength for the National League East pennant drive, acquired ace reliever Jim "Mudcat" Grant from Oakland Athletics Monday.

Pittsburgh general manager Joe L. Brown refused to disclose what the Athletics received for the right-hander, who has compiled a 6-2 record with 24 saves and a 1.71 earned run average, among the best in the American League.

Baseball Groups Boost Team Fund

Baseball groups are providing the kind of support required to send Victoria's own Centennials to the world baseball championships in Colombia in November.

President Gar Taylor of the Victoria and District Baseball Association announced today that the fund had reached the $900 mark and was still climbing.

The club needs $3,500 which is half the cost of equipment, uniforms and walking-out dress, and part of the transportation expenses.

The federal government is paying 75 per cent of the transportation and the remaining expenses are to be borne by the Canadian Baseball Association and the team. Victoria players form the nucleus of the club.

Two groups which added to the fund today are the Victoria and District Association with $300 and the Triangle Little League with $20. Saturday the B.C. Baseball Association contributed $200.

Individual contributors announced today were Victor Booth, Mary Booth, W. Embury, M. Embury, Pat Cooper and John Oster.

MINOR LEAGUES HELP

All the minor leagues in the Greater Victoria area have pledged their support to the fund are expected to submit donations within the next few days.

Donations may be sent or taken to Bell's Men's Wear, 721 Yates; Al Kubicek at the Shelbourne and Hillside Esso Station; Canada Trust, 650 View Street; Ingraham Hotel, 2915 Douglas Street.

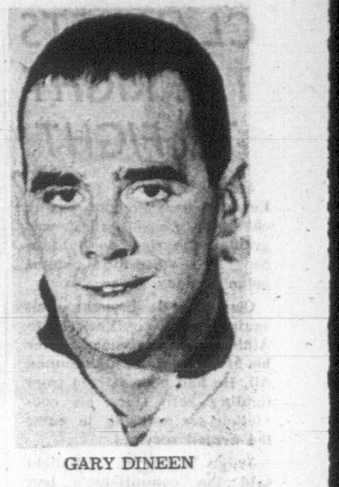
DINEEN SPARKLES . . . . . . IN KINGS' CAMP

Gary Pleases Larry



GARY DINEEN

Picked up by the Kings from Minnesota North Stars in the reverse draft this summer, Dineen has been tackilng his training camp chores with remarkable energy and agility despite off-season surgery.

According to Regan, Eddie Shack and Dick Duff are also off to good starts in training and a fast getaway by the veteran pair could rate as a big plus for the squad.

Duff, who is heading for his 16th full NHL campaign, should pass the 1,000-game mark this season. He played on two Stanley Cup championship teams during his 10 years with Toronto Maple-Leafs, who traded him to New York in 1963. Another trade sent Dick to Montreal a year later and he was with Canadiens for four more Stanley Cup triumphs before moving to the Kings midway through last season.

Over the years, Duff has collected 273 goals and 274 assists in regular-season play and added 30 goals and 49 assists in playoff battles.

Newly-acquired winger Larry Mickey has also earned Regan's praise for his work on the ice during the first few days of training.

JOCKEYS DECIDE TO ACCEPT OFFER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jockeys riding at Exhibition Park in Vancouver called off a threatened strike on Monday and voted to accept the latest offer from horse owners on riding fees.

The offer, based on Ontario fees but scaled down for Vancouver purses, had been rejected Sunday by Tak Inouye, the jockeys' national representative. At a meeting Monday, however, the two dozen jockeys involved voted to accept the offer.

Riders will receive $61 for a winning mount, based on the minimum purse of $1,660, $37 for a second, $27 for third and $24 for riding an unplaced horse.

Owners also promised to negotiate a scale for 1971 during the off season.

In Monday's racing, Basil Frazier booted home two winners to consolidate his hold on the riding lead, boosting his total to 65 victories as he rode Touch Up and Adversary to first-place finishes before 5,168 fans.

Gordie Rands Takes Medal

Gordie Rands, 17, won medal honors by carding a two-under-par while Brian Gandy, 19, was runner-up with a 66.

Kerr Paces Field In Colwood Test

City Amateur champion Lawrie Kerr fired a two-over-par 72 Sunday to take medal honors in the qualifying round of the annual Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club championship tournament.

Sabre Goalie Requires Surgery After Injury

By The Canadian Press

Injuries, past and present, are the talk of the National Hockey League training camps as the last of 14 teams settled into their pre-season locations Monday.

Chicago Black Hawks, at Chicago Stadium, and Philadelphia Flyers, at Quebec City, were the final arrivals. Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings were first off the mark Sept. 9, the Leafs at Maple leaf Gardens and Detroit at Port Huron, Mich.

Farr, 23, underwent surgery in Toronto Monday night and will lose at least 10 days of training camp.

Meanwhile, Toronto winger Ron Ellis skated Monday but did not take part in the Leaf scrimmage. Ellis, Toronto's top goal scorer last year, injured his knee Friday in a collision with defenceman Mike Pelyk and is expected to miss the Leafs' first exhibition game at Ottawa Thursday against St. Louis Blues.

Boston veteran Johnny Bucyk, whose knee was injured in a boating accident in August, is expected at the Bruin camp in London, Ont., Wednesday.

Serge Savard, recovering from a broken leg, skated for the first time with Montreal Canadiens and described his 15-minute session as tiring. Doctors estimate it fill be at least two weeks before the defenceman can take part in regular workouts.

BOUCHARD SIGNS

Pierre Bouchard, son of a former Montreal defence great, Emile (Butch) Bouchard, was signed to the Canadiens' blueline corp. He performed last year with Montreal Voyageurs, Montreal's farm team in the American Hockey League.

Vancouver Canucks, meanwhile, will look at six goaltenders during their three exhibition games this weekend to determine who they will carry along with veteran Charlie Hodge.

Hodge apparently has the No. 1 position sewn up. Coach Hal Laycoe gave the Montrealer permission to arrive late "because he's in good physical condition and doesn't need the preliminary training." He was drafted from Oakland Seals last June.

In Calgary vying for the back-up position behind Hodge are Ed Dyck, from Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada Hockey League; Dale Halterman, University of Calgary; Dune Wilson, drafted from Philadelphia Flyers; and veteran minor league pros George Gardner, Lynn Zimmerman and Serge Aubrey.

MEET NORTH STARS

Vancouver, with a 10-game pre-season schedule, plays at Edmonton Friday, Calgary Saturday and Winnipeg Sunday, all against Minnesota North Stars.

General manager Bud Poile said the main problem his new NHL club has faced in camp is finding an interpreter so Finlander Lasse Oksanen "could feel at home."

Pistol Matches Slated At Thetis

Events will start at 9 a.m. and all shooters are invited to complete in .22-calibre, centre-fire and service pistol matches.

Lead Shared In Gorge Test

Former-champion Al MacLeod and Karl Zwick each carded two over-par 74s Sunday in the qualifying round of the Gorge Vale Golf Club championship tournament.

Medal honors will be decided later this week in a playoff between the two players.

Dave Mick, Jim Clapp, Reg Clarkson and Steve Allen finished in a four-way deadlock for the final three positions in the championship competition. Clapp lost the resulting sudden-death playoff when he three-putted the first hole.

Match play begins Sunday.

Victoria Club Wins B.C. Police Crown

KAMLOOPS — Victoria Subdivision RCMP team, representing Vancouver Island, swept through the nine-team, double-loss-elimination competition without a defeat during the weekend to win the annual softball tournament for B.C. police forces.

On Sunday, the Victorians downed Burnaby 4-0 in a battle between undefeated teams, and then, after the mainlanders had battled back through the losers' bracket, downed Burnaby 5-2 in extra innings to take the title with their fifth straight victory.

In earlier games, Victoria defeated Delta 2-1, Vancouver City 7-3 and North Vancouver 12-8.

Victoria's George Kuich, who yielded only five runs in 25 innings while winning three games and saving one, was selected as the tourney's top pitcher.

CLAY GETS THE RIGHT TO FIGHT

Clay had brought suit against the New York State Athletic Commission under his Muslim name, Muhammad Ali. He had been barred from fighting here since his conviction for refusing to enter the armed services.

Judge Walter R. Mansfield said the commission's ban was "arbitrary and unreasonable," and a departure from the commission's "established practice of granting licences to applicants convicted of crimes and military offences."

Clay has not fought in three years. Last week, however, he signed to fight Jerry Quarry in Atlanta Oct. 26, under a Georgia licence.

McClinton Plans To Quit Football

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Running back Curtis McClinton of Kansas City Chiefs said Monday he is retiring from professional football.

McClinton, 31, who has played pro football for eight seasons and was rookie of the year in the AFL in 1962, gave no reason and did not indicate what he plans to do.

FLOYD PATTERSON
. . . two-year layoff

Youngest to Win Title, Floyd Returning at 35

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd Patterson returns to the ring at the age of 35 after a two-year absence tonight for a 10-round match with Charlie (Devil) Green at Madison Square Garden.

The man who was the youngest, at age 21, to win the world heavyweight title in 1956 and the only man to ever win it back, in 1960, has not fought since he lost a questionable decision to Jimmy Ellis Sept. 14, 1968, in Stockholm. Ellis then held the World Boxing Association's version of the title.

Patterson, plagued by a weak chin, has been knocked out by Ingemar Johansson and twice by Sonny Liston while compiling a 46-7-1 career record. He scored 35 knockouts, including two over Johannson who knocked him loose from the title in 1959.

Green, 28, is a puncher with an ordinary 13-6 record for a career that dates back only to May 21, 1966. He never has been in with a ranked heavyweight. A rough and tumble slugger, Green is expected to come out swinging.

Patterson, who has made about $8 million in the ring, is getting only a $25,000 guarantee and a privilege of 32½ per cent of the receipts. Green gets 15 per cent and no guarantee.

Knockout Win In Comeback

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Jimmy Meilleur knocked out Howard Blood of Detroit in the seventh round of a scheduled eight-round middleweight bout Monday night, his first ring appearance in two years.

Also on the night's card was Gary Broughton, Canadian middleweight champion from Kitchener, Ont., who got a TKO against Joe Blair of Akron, Ohio, at 44 seconds of the third round.

Hockey Deadline

Final registration of players wishing to compete with Victoria Minor Hockey Association teams this season is scheduled Wednesday at Memorial Arena from 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

U.S. Troops Suspected In Viet Rape

SAIGON (AP) — An official South Vietnamese report of the death of a 52-year-old woman and the rape and death of her prospective daughter-in-law near a U.S. base has brought an upsurge in anti-American feeling in recent days.

An official U.S. report says no American troops were involved in the incident Aug. 29 in Binh Tuy province, 75 miles east of Saigon. However, an official South Vietnamese report, while drawing no conclusions, implies there was American involvement.

The Vietnamese report said the body of one of the women, Nguyen Thi Bac, 50, was found 50 yards from an American artillery base.

The American report said the nearest U.S. fire base was 800 yards from where Mrs. Bac's body was found.

The South Vietnamese report said a doctor was appointed by a court to examine the body of Nguyen Thi Hong, fiance of Mrs. Bac's son, and that he concluded she had been raped.

CLAIM DISPUTED

U.S. investigators said three doctors—an American, a Korean and a Vietnamese—found no evidence that either woman had been raped.

The Vietnamese report said Miss Hong crawled back to her home and said she and Mrs. Bac were working in a rice field when four American soldiers came and raped them until Mrs. Bac died.

It quoted doctors as saying that Mrs. Bac had been beaten on the head and that she fell into the mud and suffocated. Miss Hong was raped and lost her strength and caught a cold while crawling back to her home, the report said. She died in a hospital the next day.

"It is very hard to find out the people who committed the crime because the victims were the only eyewitnesses," the Vietnamese report said.

American sources in Saigon say the incident appeared to be either a "Viet Cong or Buddhist plot" intended to embarrass Americans.

The alleged incident has been given extensive coverage in all local Vietnamese and English-language newspapers, although there has been no public announcement of it from authorities either confirming it or denying it.

Cambodian Force Trapped by Cong

SKOUN, Cambodia (Reuters) — Viet Cong and North Vietnamese units today swung east across Route 6 about seven miles north of this battered town, apparently trapping a 5,000-man Cambodian force.

The eight-battalion government force withdrew nearly two miles south of the hamlet of Taing Kouk, 52 miles north of Phnom Penh, the capital, after running into withering Viet Cong fire for the second consecutive day.

Villagers fleeing from Phum Trapaing Kouk, about three miles south of Taing Kouk, said the Viet Cong this morning moved into the village from the west across flooded paddyfields.

Flooding caused by monsoon rains forced the Cambodian troops to keep to the narrow asphalt road leading to Kompong Thom, 35 miles south of Taing Kouk.

Government troops now face heavy casualties trying to move either north or south.

A Reuters correspondent travelling along Route 6 past Skoun only avoided driving to Viet Cong territory when three Buddhist monks fleeing from Phum Trapaing Kouk waved down his car and said that the Viet Cong had set up ambushes on the road a short distance to the north.

They added that the guerrillas had blasted two trucks with rockets, killing both drivers.

The Cambodian force set out from north of Phnom Penh Sept. 7 and met little opposition until reaching the outskirts of Taing Kouk, where it has been held up for five days by a mined bridge and heavy Viet Cong fire.

Initial field reports said an estimated 500 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were dug in around Taing Douk, but military sources now believe there are 1,500 guerrillas in the vicinity.

U.S. Desertions More Than Double

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, noting desertion rates in the U.S. army and marines have more than doubled in the last four years, has established a uniform policy for handling servicemen who leave their units without orders.

Deputy Defence Secretary David M. Packard issud a directive Monday calling for establishment of a deserter information point toact as a central processing agency for all armed forces "for the control, counting and dissemination of information" on absentees.

Under the directive, servicemen who are absent without leave for more than 30 days are classifid as deserters. Within seven days after an absentee is declared to have deserted, the directive said, information on his background will be fed into the FBI's national Crime Information Centre computer and given to civilian law officers.

HIGHER REWARD

The Pentagon also has asked Congress to increase the $25 reward now given civilian authorities for help in arresting deserters. No specific figure was suggested.

Pentagon figures show some 27,000 men deserted the army and 6,654 deserted the Marine Corps in fiscal 1967. Th figures have increased every year since, with the 1970 fiscal year figures showing 65,643 deserters from the army and 16,109 from the marines.

Desertions in the navy showed a slight decrease in the four-year period while the air force reported a slight increase.

Military officials blame the increase on the Vietnam war.

SICKNESS SWAMPS MD

GLOUCESTER, Va. (AP) — Dr. John R. Gill inserted a two-column ad in the current edition of the weekly Gloucester-Mathews Gazette. It said: "Notice! Due to the large amount of serious illness among my patients, I will be unable to take a vacation this year."

Brain, Computer Linked

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A team of Yale University scientists has implanted a two-way radio link between the brain of a chimpanzee and a computer, enabling the brain to receive its own signals from the computer.

The experiment raises the possibility of establishing electronic communication from one brain to another, the scientists said. It also suggests new ways of treating mental and physical disorders, they said.

The team was led by Dr. Jose M. R. Delgado, a neurophysicist at the Yale School of Medicine. He is a pioneer in electrical brain stimulation and has experimentally induced anger, pleasure and other emotions in animals and humans.

In the champanzee experiment, electrodes implanted in the animal's head picked up electrical brain waves which were transmitted to a computer by a small receiver-transmitter atop its head.

The computer returned a control signal to another part of the brain through the receiver. Once stimulated, the latter part of the brain internally turned off the brain activity originally sensed by the computer.

The scientists reported that the chimp, named Paddy, changed moods often—at the computer's direction—during the 1½-year experiment but returned to normal when the computer was disconnected.

EGYPT BLASTS HIJACK EFFORTS

U.S. Block of Peace Talks Charged

RIAD
. . . . political standstill

CAIRO (AP)— Egypt says the United States is blocking the Middle East peace talks by backing Israel but that Cairo will not let Palestinian hijackers "jeopardize the peace-seeking efforts of the Arabs."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad said in Cairo Monday that U.S. support of Israeli charges of Egyptian ceasefire violations is to blame for the current "political standstill" in the Middle east. He added that the charges are "baseless."

Israel issued its 14th complaint Monday that Egypt has violated the U.S.-sponsored agreement by moving Egyptian-manned SAM-2 anti-aircraft missiles and Russian-manned SAM-3 missiles closer to the Suez canal.

Riad also reiterated Egypt's charge that Washington has broken a promise to withhold Phantom jets and other arms from Israel during the ceasefire. American officials have denied there was any such promise and have maintained that the United States has a publicly-declared obligation to maintain the Middle East arms balance by counter-acting the flow of Soviet arms to Egypt.

Cairo radio said Monday that "Egypt will not allow a Palestinian maverick group to jeopardize the peace-seeking efforts of the Arabs and justify Israel's demand for additional arms to be used against the Arabs."

Cairo radio also said the forthcoming talks between Israeli Premier Golda Meir and President Nixon will "surely" centre on the hijackings "and the perils which the Israelis and the rest of the world face at the hands of the Palestinian commandos." Mrs. Meir is scheduled to meet with Nixon Friday in Washington.

Riad's office said he has postponed a visit to the United States. He had been scheduled to lead Egypt's delegation to the UN General Assembly's 25th anniversary session, which opens today. No explanation was given for the change.

In northern Jordan, fighting between guerrillas and the Jordanian army broke out for the second day. The Popular Front said two guerrillas were killed.

Israeli sources reported that fighting also broke out Monday night in Lebanon between Arab guerrillas and Lebanese forces. Light arms and mortar fire was exchanged for about half an hour, and mortar and machine-gun fire was heard later across the central sector of the Israel-Lebanon border, the sources said.

Flights Resume

BERN (AP) — The federal aviation office said it has authorized Swissair to resume flights to Beirut. Flights had been suspenee after the hijackings to the Middle East.

The costly strike by 4,000 B.C. members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada goes on and on and on How come Canada's highest paid pulp and paper workers won't go to work?

The strike in half of British Columbia's pulp and paper industry is now in its eighth week. It is harming employees and their families, the community and the industry... lost wages, lost jobs, lost revenues, lost markets. Four thousand pulp workers are on strike. Another 5,000 logging and sawmill workers are unemployed as a direct result of the strike.

Striking members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, if they returned to work today, would get an immediate 7½% increase (30 cents an hour minimum). In the next 22 months their increases would total 23% to 28%. This means increases ranging from $150 to over $200 a month within two years on top of what is already the highest pulp industry pay rate in Canada.

PPWC members would also receive substantial improvements in fringe benefits including health and welfare, pensions, vacations, and other contract provisions.

These increases and improvements have been accepted by 6,000 industry employees in 15 locals of two other B.C. pulp unions... and in the process not one day's pay has been lost through strike action.

But PPWC members who went on strike in the middle of negotiations have lost more than $5½ million in wages and continue to lose an estimated $160,000 each day.

The situation is tragic and unnecessary. But because the union political objective of gaining advantage over rival unions is placed ahead of the welfare of the members, the strike goes on.

The industry must treat all of its employees fairly and equally. There is no room for inter-union politics at the bargaining table. There must be one settlement for all.

The PPWC has resisted the principle of a three year agreement and has ignored the fact that the great majority of pulp and paper settlements in North America this year have been for three years. In fact, a local of the PPWC last year negotiated a three year agreement in Alberta.

PPWC members should now be allowed their democratic right to a free, fair and secret vote on the merits of the industry settlement, instead of being asked to answer obscurely worded questions in picket line ballots, "show-of-hands" votes and other, controlled situations.

In spite of statements by union leaders that a continuation of the strike will force a better settlement, everyone concerned must understand very clearly that the proposed settlement is a final one. The undersigned companies will make no new offers under any circumstances.

FREIGHTER PILOT TESTIFIES:

No Change of Course Recalled

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian marine pilot said Monday he could not recall changing the course of a Soviet freighter in the final moments prior to its Aug. 2 collision with a British Columbia ferry.

Capt. D. G. Crabbe of Victoria, testifying in the 17th day of a federal inquiry into the fatal collision, said he could remember only an initial course change to begin a swing into a narrow channel where the collision occurred.

He said he ordered 10 degrees of starboard helm to move into Active Pass, between Mayne and Galiano Islands.

As they entered the pass, he said, he saw the ferry Queen of Victoria on his side of the pass and "was immediately concerned with her position."

At that point he normally would have ordered a further course change of 20 degrees of starboard helm to cut around a point into the channel right-of-way, but could not "recollect for fact if I gave another order to the helm or not."

Capt. Crabbe was clarifying initial testimony given Friday.

The actual spot where the two vessels collided, with the death of three ferry passengers, is a major point of contention in the inquiry.

Capt. Crabbe said he gave two quick blasts of the ship's whistle to indicate the ferry should stop or stay where it was on course — which he said was close to his side of the pass and on his starboard side.

* * *

He said his signal should have indicated to the ferry skipper that the ferry's way out of the situation "would be to keep to his own side."

"If he (the ferry) had not been on the wrong side of the channel, I would never have blown two short blasts."

Capt. Crabbe said the two vessels were about half a mile apart when he first saw the ferry's bow from behind the point and he had no time to give elaborate signals.

His first intention was to continue his 10-degree swing, keeping the ferry on his starboard side but still keeping to his side of the channel. Ships pass on the starboard sides of channels under rules of the road.

* * *

Almost simultaneous with his whistle signal, he said, he ordered the freighter to half speed astern. Capt. Nikolai Khaustov, master of the freighter, put it full astern.

Public Said More Wary About Pesticide Use

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — The public now is inclined to be wary of all chemical pesticides and thinks more about weighing the benefits against the risks and of the possible effects on the environment, David Spurgeon of Toronto said today.

Mr. Spurgeon, Toronto Globe and Mail science reporter and editor of Science Forum, said this view is not confined to chemical pesticides.

"More and more scientists, and even technologists themselves, are beginning to see the results of technology as a mixed blessing that must be carefully analyzed."

Speaking to the Canadian Agricultural Chemicals Association annual convention, Mr. Spurgeon said the public now is more enlightened and skeptical —"a more involved public."

"More and more manufacturers and innovators are going to have to prove that the benefits of their products are worth the total cost."

PRESS CRITICIZED

He said because of the nature of news, accidents and deaths attributed to pesticides, wildlife kills and reported dangers to the environment all received more prominence than regular, safe use of pesticides.

"It is the only way in which we are going to get progress in the form of less injurious pesticides, for it does lead to an aroused public awareness of dangers they otherwise might not know existed."

Mr. Spurgeon was critical of the press because it had not "put the record straight" in special articles on pesticides.

" . . . It is partly because of the nature of newspapers and it is partly because there are too few qualified and experienced science writers."

More trust and co-operation between the agricultural chemical industry and the government, their scientists and the press was needed.

School Board Looks Again At Fluoride Test Program

The Greater Victoria school board at its next meeting will reconsider approving a proposed two-year fluoride testing program involving Grade 5 students that was unanimously rejected at a mid-August board meeting.

The decision to reconsider was made at the education committee meeting Monday and the next board meeting is Sept. 21.

The project was to have been a three-way study by the school board, the provincial department of health and Warner-Lambert Research Institute.

About 1,000 Grade 5 students were to have used a decay-preventing potential supplied by the research institute daily and the health department was to help administer the program.

'IDEAL PLACE'

Dr. David Parfitt, a public health dentist who helped design the proposed study, appeared before the committee meeting and explained the need for fluoride testing as a means of fighting dental disease.

"Victoria is an ideal place to carry out a study because the population is steady," he said.

Parfitt introduced Dr. Alan Richardson of the University of British Columbia's department of restorative dentistry to the committee members.

Richardson explained that he had recently finished a 2½-year study involving 850 students in the Trail school district in which Warner Lambert supplied the toothpaste and toothbrushes.

He said he found the research institute co-operative.

"The whole objective of the thing is to develop another product for mothers to buy in the future," trustee Peter Bunn said in answer to Richardson's submission.

MONEY-MAKER

He said the study would be used to make money for the parent company of the Warner-Lambert Research Institute.

Reasons for the board rejection in August were that trustees felt there was not enough information provided of the study and advocates were presenting it on short notice.

Trustee Allan McKinnon agreed with Bunn.

"I am not sure the school board should get involved in something that is not very close to education, he said.

Board chairman Carron Jameson suggested that with added information supplied the board should look again at the study.

DRUG LIFE 'OVERRATED'

Drugs and sexual freedom are overrated and overexploited aspects of man's current search for self-worth in a society of conflicting values and increasing amounts of leisure time, University of Victoria's chancellor told a large audience Monday.

About 300 people filled the MacLaurin Building theatre to hear Roderick Haig-Brown talk about the quality of life, the first speaker in a series to be presented by the Uvic extension association.

FOUND IN OTHERS

"The real quality of living is not to be found in drugs, precisely because it is to be found in their opposite: the sharpening of innate perception and sensitivity, Haig-Brown said.

He said the new freedoms in the arts have been "clumsily and awkwardly used and often outrageously exploited.

"The result has been that the sense of uniqueness and the intimacy that made sexual experience, the most intense of human relationships has been significantly degraded."

The Campbell River judge and naturalist said dissident youth would only find a "temporary refuge" in living off the earth in communes.

He later added in answer to a question the history of communes has shown them to be unsuccessful except in a few instances where strict authority was imposed on the inhabitants.

Haig-Brown said the most common trait of man's search for a life of meaning is the desire to help other people.

"It is a people-oriented rather than a profit-oriented philosophy. . . ."

"The real human function is not simply to produce, or fill a job slot, or make money. It is to sharpen perceptions, physical and mental . . . to grow and keep on growing from cradle to grave."

Local Dog Wins Obedience Trial

A local dog and an entry from Seattle emerged winners in trials conducted by the Greater Victoria Dog Obedience Training Club at Esquimalt Sports Centre Friday and Saturday.

A Pointer, Ch. Grousemoor Gorgeous of Ide, owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Brennan of Victoria, won the novice A class at Friday's show with a score of 195, went on to win the same class and finish highest scoring dog in trial Saturday with an identical score.

SEATTLE DOG WINS

Another winner Friday was a Miniature Poodle, Salopia Bouclee, owned by Katherine Costain of Victoria, which won the Open A competition with a score of 194.

OTHER WINNERS

Other winners Saturday:

A Boxer, Maid of Perfection, owned by Mrs. O. R. Recker of Peoria, Arizona, tops in Novice B with a score of 194.

Yukon Eyes B.C. Hookup

The B.C. Amateur Hockey Association will hold its annual general meeting at Williams Lake on Sept. 18, 19 and 20.

Over 250 delegates are expected to attend. There will be a heavy agenda with over 50 resolutions to be considered, included in which is an application by the Yukon Amateur Hockey Association to affiliate with the B.C. body.

Minor hockey tournaments and playoff venues will be determined.

There will also be discussion to increase mutual aid benefits for dentistry.

Hijacking Allows Man To Defect

MUNICH (AP) — A young East German aboard the Romanian airliner diverted to Munich Monday night decided to remain in West Germany along with the Hungarian hijackers, Munich police confirmed today.

A police spokesman said the defector turned himself over to police at Riem airport after the Tarom airliner with 84 passengers and a crew of five touched down.

The spokesman said the man is not in custody because he was not involved in the hijacking. As an East German he is automatically granted asylum in West Germany.

Police are holding three Hungarian men, a Hungarian woman and two children who had boarded the British-built BAC One Eleven airliner at Budapest. It was on a flight from Bucharest via the Hungarian capital to Prague.

Police said Geza Karacsony, a 23-year-old mechanic, and Janos Mamutzits, a 25-year-old metal worker, brandished pistols and forced their way into the cockpit as the airliner was over Czechoslovakia. They then ordered the pilot to fly to Munich.

Police said the other Hungarians were Miklos Biro, 29, his 24-year-old wife, and their two sons, ages 5 and 2.

All six are from Debrechen, Hungary, and have requested political asylum in West Germany because of dissatisfaction with conditions in their country.

Stratford Attendance Down Sharply

STRATFORD — Attendance at the Avon Theatre this season averaged 45.7 per cent of capacity, compared to 79.5 per cent last year, says box office manager Bruce McDonald.

Gross receipts for the Avon season were down to $182,432 from $266,000 in 1969.

General Manager William Wylie said earlier it would be up to artistic director Jean Gascon and the board of directors to decide whether the modern and contemporary trend in theatre adopted at Avon this year would be continued.

The Marcel Marceau program of Mime this season had a 90.0 per cent attendance but audiences for the contemporary plays were much smaller: 38.3 per cent for Vatzlav. 39.1 per cent for The Architect and the Emperor or Assyria and 45.8 per cent for The Sun Never Sets.

HOLLYWOOD — Broadway producer David Merrick, whose hits have cleared more than $20 million profit and include the longest-running Hello, Dolly! is taking his first plunge into movie production.

Merrick, 48, said he will make a film version of his Broadway success, Child's Play, for Paramount.

Child's Play, winner of five Tony awards—stage equivalent of Hollywood's Oscar—has its 241st performance Tuesday.

Hello, Dolly! played its 2,718th performance last week, surpassing My Fair Lady.

TORONTO — Goin' Down The Road, the Canadian-made movie about two Maritimers who come to Toronto searching for success, will open in New York Oct. 14.

Other United States bookings will depend on the movie's reaction with critics and audiences, says the distributor, Cinecom.

Goin' Down The Road, produced by Don Shebib of Toronto, has taken in more than $50,000 at the box office here and is showing in Montreal, Ottawa and Vancouver. It is soon to open in the Maritimes.

CHATHAM, N.Y. — Singer Harry Belafonte has been arrested on a charge of taking $8 worth of groceries from a supermarket on the main street of this village in northern New York state.

The 43-year-old entertainer entered no plea to the petty larceny charge and the case was recessed until Sept. 22.

Belafonte was arrested late Saturday by a part-time village patrolman after allegedly walking out of the supermarket with the brown paper bag of groceries.

Belafonte has a summer home in nearby Red Rock.

HOLLYWOOD — Singer Dell Reese "took over 1,000 stitches but she's okay and has been taken off the critical list," her manager, Lee Magid, said Monday.

Miss Reese, 37, slipped at the pool of her home and crashed through a glass door last Wednesday, suffering severe cuts on her left arm and leg.

NEW YORK — The Metropolitan Opera has opened its 86th season with Verdi's Ernani. The singing was magnificent, say critics.

Songs 'Brainwash' Young Americans

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Vice-President Spiro Agnew accused some songwriters and motion picture makers Monday night of brainwashing young Americans with lyrics and films.

The words and pictures carry a message, Agnew said, of a drug culture that "threatens to sap our national strength unless we move hard and fast to bring it under control."

Agnew said he wasn't suggesting any conspiracy among lyricists, entertainers or movie producers.

"But the cumulative impact of some of their work advances the wrong cause," he said.

"It's a catchy tune, but until it was pointed out to me I never realized that the friends were assorted drugs," Agnew said.

He also criticized a song called White Rabbit by the Jefferson Airplane, citing this passage:

"One pill makes you larger and one pill makes you small.

"And the ones that mother gives you don't do anything at all.

"Go ask Alice when she's 10 feet tall."

"There are scores of such songs," Agnew said. "The titles themselves often whisper or shout the message. Listen to these: The Acid Queen, Eight Miles High, Couldn't Get High, Don't Step on the Grass Sam and Stoned Woman."

Decision Appealed

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg Police Ahletic Association will appeal the decision of an arbitration board awarding the city policemen a six-per-cent wage increase.

Roy Gallagher, solicitor for the association, the bargaining agent for the city's policemen, said the appeal will be taken to the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench.

"Our position is going to be that the arbitration was not conducted in a proper legal manner," Gallagher said. "I don't want to go into any more details than that."

Show Planned

EDMONTON (CP) — Oh! Calcutta!, the controversial stage show, will be shown here on closed circuit television Sept. 28, Edmonton businessman G. S. Shepherd says.

However, Calgary residents will not have the same opportunity. The Calgary Exhibition and Stampede Ltd. has refused use of the Calgary sales pavilion for the showing.

The show has run into censorship problems in some parts of Canada and the United States.

Lift Plan Rapped

REGINA (CP) — Provincial Highways Minister Dave Boldt says many farmers who co-operated with Operation Lift, the federal government plan to reduce wheat acreage, are getting a poor deal. He said the Canadian Wheat Board has not authorized the quotas that would permit many farmers to deliver higher grades of wheat. Instead, Mr. Boldt said the board has been accepting only the lower grades.

Weather Records Shattered

EDMONTON (CP) — Record low temperatures for Sept. 14 were set Monday in three areas of Alberta and one Saskatchewan centre.

The public weather office in Edmonton said Pincher Creek, Alta., at 21 degrees, was five degrees colder than the previous record established in 1916.

Jasper had a reading of 29 degrees, one degree colder than the old record set in 1961. Coronation reported 23 degrees, to break the old record of 29 set in 1961.

In Saskatchewan, Kindersley at 25, was one degree colder than the record of 26 set in 1936.

Record minimums for Sept. 14 were also tied at Saskatoon with 25 degrees, Lethbridge 27, Banff 23 and Medicine Hat 29.

Dynamite Charges Net 10-Year Term

NELSON (CP) — Provincial Court Judge William Evans Monday sentenced three men to a total of 19 years in prison for conspiracy and possession of explosives.

Fred Hadikin, 64, of Thrums was found guilty of conspiracy to commit or allow an indictable offence and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Peter Perepolkin, 60, of Shoreacres, found guilty of the same charge, was sentenced to five years.

CHARGE REDUCED

Peter Ostrikoff, 68, of Thrums, who had been charged with conspiracy but had his charge reduced to possession of an explosive without lawful excuse, was found guilty of the reduced charge and sentenced to four years.

Nick Postnikoff, 65, of Thrums who earlier pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge was given a two-year suspended sentence.

In his judgment, Judge Evans said, "The people of this area, both those of the Doukhobor faith and non-Doukhobors, were hopeful that the violence of the past was done with, that all could live in peace and quiet, but you who are 60 years of age and over want things otherwise."

"You sought to change the way of peace by violence, regardless of the consequences to innocent people."

He said he was satisfied that Hadikin was leader of the group and gave him the heavier sentence.

Search Continues

BELLA BELLA (CP) — An air-sea search was to continue today for four boys missing almost a week in a 12-foot boat, in waters off this west coast centre about 300 miles northwest of Vancouver.

Missing are Johnny Starr, 14, Robert Harris 9, and his brother Jackson, 5, and Alfred Hall, 6. All are from Bella Bella.

Buses Advocated

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — About 20 members of the North Vancouver branch of the Society for Pollution Control passed out leaflets at a busy corner here Monday urging motorists on their way to work to prevent pollution and take the bus. John Cox, SPEC's information officer, said only one or two persons occupied each car, and traffic was backed up far along Capilano Road, an artery into Vancouver.

Certification Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial labor relations board has for a second time refused to allow a union to represent employees of the B.C. Mediation Commission, the province's chief go-between in management-labor disputes.

The B.C. Government Employees Union is seeking certification to represent eight clerical employees of the commission.

Its original application was rejected June 16 when the labor relations board said the labor relations act does not apply to commission clerks because they are employees of the government.

Hunters Charged

KEREMEOS (CP) — Three American hunters were charged Monday with hunting without licences after being tracked for three days in the south Okanagan by RCMP.

"There's more to this than just hunting without a licence," said Corporal Jack Fuller of the RCMP Keremeos detachment. He refused to elaborate, but did add that other charges, including illegal entry into Canada, were being considered.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

The north coast remained cloudy overnight and there was some cloudiness also in the central Interior and in the Kootenays area. Other parts of B.C. were clear, however, and at some Interior points early morning temperature readings were just above the frost point.

A ridge of high pressure over southwestern B.C. holds the promise for bright sunshine for most of the province. The cloud will persist on the north coast though and some rain is expected on the Charlottes.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The fact that your skin can absorb a certain amount of water can mean discomfort for you in cold weather. That is when heat is lost by conduction to the colder areas of your damp skin from the deeper areas of your body. You feel damp and chilled.

Hundreds of years ago people thought damp weather was bad because they believed that moisture soaked through the skin from the atmosphere and soon prevented normal perspiration that, in turn, caused all sorts of diseases such as scurvy, pneumonia, tuberculosis and even the bellyache.

When doctor-scientists learned that the diseases were caused by germs and diet and bad living conditions, then people knew that damp weather didn't make them sick at all.

This is our old Corona, probably one of the best known import sedans in North America. It had contemporary North American styling, a big gutsy 90 hp. engine that gave you an effortless 80 mph. cruising, durability which has become legendary, plus all the luxury and safety features. For one low inclusive price. But, after six years we improved the Corona. Not just changed it, really improved it.

The new Toyota Corona.

What's new about it? Everything. It's longer, wider inside and out, stronger and faster.

Take the engine. It's now an overhead cam four. It develops 108 hp., has a top speed of 105 mph, cruises at 85 and gives up to 32 miles per gallon.

We've replaced the drum brakes with power assisted disc brakes up front. Visibility is improved, vent windows are gone and there is tinted safety glass all round. Side windows are curved to improve shoulder room. The new Corona comes equipped with fully reclining bucket seats or a bench seat in the automatic version. That's not all. The new Toyota Corona has an electric rear window defogger, steering lock ignition switch, an electric clock, "Fresh-flow" ventilation which works with all the windows closed, plus improved and expanded safety equipment. And so it goes. One improvement leads to another until only the name is the same. The only extra. A radio. Everything else is included in the one low price.

That's something we will never change.

NEW TOYOTA CORONA. $2470.

Suggested list price F.O.B. Vancouver. Plus freight, handling, license and taxes.

Two of our top salesmen just never keep quiet.

Meet Mr. SA2600 and Mr. 550C. Two of our top salesmen. We know they're great because about the only time they're quiet is late at night.

You see, at Toshiba, we believe in building sets that sell themselves. (Let's face it, all the talking in the world won't convince you to buy one of our sets. A few minutes listening to one will).

Take the SA2600. It boasts an Input for magnetic or ceramic cartridge. An AUX jack. A recording jack. A DIN jack. And a private listening jack. Plus an OTL circuit, FM stereo automatic circuit, and low distortion. And because we want it to sound even better, we include 2 Toshiba balanced SS11 air suspension speakers. All this for just $199.95*.

Then, there's our very stylish 550C at only $129.95*. Featuring a tuner section only 3½" wide. Which means it fits almost anywhere. It features an AM/FM/FM stereo radio, FET, and automatic frequency control. Balance and separate Bass and Treble controls, Plus matching air suspension speakers.

Do yourself a favour. Drop into your nearest Toshiba Dealer and turn on one of our top quality modular stereo units. Like we said, that'll tell you more than our talking ever will. *Suggested retail price

NEW LIGHT TOWER, due to go into service on Trial Island within a few days, looks down on the keeper's house and the light which has acted as a guide to thousands of skippers since it was installed in the early 1900s. At right, Jack and Dorothy Horne relax on their rock-perched verandah in between the steady routine of chores that allows no time for boredom.

SCHOOL BUS SERVICE ENDED

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has signed into law a bill forbidding transportation of school children by bus, a method widely used to achieve racial balance in classrooms, except with consent of parents or guardians.

Approving the bill Monday, Reagan said that "forcing children to be herded onto buses and carted across town each day—away from their familiar home environments—represents a vast and dehumanizing manipulation of school populations."

Officials of three California districts with racial school bus systems said they felt the law would not affect their programs because their transportation was not compulsory—students could get to school by any means of travel they chose.

The San Francisco school board asked the state Supreme Court to hold that the new law will not affect its integrated bus plan.

A suit is before the U.S. Supreme Court testing the constitutionality of a 1969 North Carolina law prohibiting the use of state funds to finance buses for students outside their own districts to achieve integration.

CHALLENGING JOB ON TRIAL ISLAND

'High Rise' Replaces Familiar Landmark

By PAT DUFOUR

The usual pattern of public reaction has been reversed. All are in favor of the change — even the nearest neighbors.

When the new light is working it will almost be 100 feet above sea level, much higher than the one that has shone above the keeper's house since the early 1900s. Instead of white, it will be green, flashing every five seconds.

Farmer Construction workers, bent on finishing the project on time, confide that it's been one of the most challenging they've faced.

Made from molds used to build other towers in more remote places, every piece of the tower and its spiral staircase has been made on Trial. Each piece has been laboriously raised into position by block and tackle.

●

To make sure the new landmark will be easily seen, it's made of a special mixture of sand and aggregate that whitens with age.

Also near completion is a new flat-topped power house, complete with a roof of 7½-inch cement slabs — strong enough to bear a helicopter.

Familiar landmarks must go in the process of progress.

The old light, made in France at a cost of $20,000 (a fortune in those days) will be pensioned off. So will the copper tower in which it has sat in a bath of mercury all these years.

Six feet of the house's chimney, once needed to clear the light, will also be taken down.

Both Horne and his wife, Dorothy, are reluctant to lose the light they've tended for the past eight years.

'working on damn cow . . .' '. . . cow died . . . got new one'

Mrs. Horne says: "It has such beautiful prisms — if they just scrap it my heart will be broken."

There are no such misgivings about the old peak-roofed power house.

●

Horne reports that roof gave him many anxious moments when he was painting it, hanging, as it does, close to the craggy shoreline.

His wife reminds him that it still wasn't as bad as the one at Ballenas Light, near Nanoose, where they were stationed five years before coming to Trial.

"That one was 40 feet high and perched on a cliff with a sheer drop."

Overdoses of painting and heights are occupational hazards for lighthouse keepers and their families.

While Dorothy Horne paints pictures as a hobby, her husband adds his own contribution to the thickly-coated layers of paint that have been built up on exterior and interior walls of the island's buildings since 1906. His biggest enemy is the wind.

●

"We've had winds registering well over 80 miles an hour. You've got to time it right otherwise you'll have white paint blown all over the island! It's a rare day when you don't have wind out here."

Another building that's due to come tumbling down at Trial is an old barn. It bears witness that, as department of transport lights change, so do their keepers.

When the Hornes first went to the island they tried to keep a vegetable garden.

"There was a spot surrounded by a 10-foot fence that kept the salt water, driven by the wind, from destroying everything. But it blew down. Since then growing a garden proved a losing battle."

The barn dates back to the days when a more determined keeper waged a stubborn fight to keep him and his wife well stocked with livestock and vegetables — all island-raised.

Terse sentences, written in log books of 1917 and 1918, describe the struggle.

"Killing pigs. One weighed 169 pounds, the other, 172."

"Working in engine room and on damn cow."

"Working in engine room. Cow died."

'Went ashore. Got new cow."

"Brought back dirt for garden. Also got manure."

Superintendent of lights, Capt. Bill Exley, explains that his department has encouraged a change of brand in their keepers.

"We discourage pool tables and pianos — they're so difficult to haul. We used to transport a fair amount of them.

"Livestock, too, were quite a problem. Take the case of the keeper at Carmanah Point years ago. He wanted a cow brought ashore from the Estevan.

●

"They tied a rope around her horns and set out to pull her ashore from the rowboat. Every time they took a stroke, the rope tugged and her head went under.

"When they finally got her ashore she was still alive. But she didn't like it."

With no garden or animals to tend, the Hornes still find their days and evenings too busy to "fritter away" watching television.

Says Horne: "It interferes with my reading."

It also interferes with his maintenance chores and his hobby — boats. On the eastern end of the island, he's building himself a boat from a 32-foot discarded navy cutter.

When that palls he works an 18-foot sailboat he's making for their daughter Sally.

All their five children now live ashore but they and the Hornes' four grandchildren keep Dorothy Horne busy on weekend visits.

Then there are the growing number of pleasure boaters that run into trouble around their island.

Says Horne: "There's much more to tending a light when you're a keeper. You're a kind of unofficial lifeguard as well."

●

Both Horne and his wife hail from Manitoba but they have no intention of heading back there when retirement time comes.

They intend to take to the sea which has surrounded them for so many years.

Until that time comes they'll continue to keep watch on those who've shaken the shore dust from their feet.

Pope Paul Nears 73rd Birthday

By PATRICK O'KEEFE

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Refreshed by a long rest at his summer home, Pope Paul seems in excellent health as he nears his 73rd birthday next Saturday.

Two churchmen who see him frequently describe the pontiff's health as excellent. One calls his mood serene and the other says he had 'never seen him in better spirits."

Pope Paul's greatest concern over the last year perhaps has been how to enlist obedience from millions of restless Roman Catholics for the papal authority, which the church teaches derives from Christ. It's a matter likely to preoccupy him in the year ahead as well.

One challenge to the Pope's authority grew out of his encyclical Humanae Vitae—Of Human Life—issued in July, 1968. It condemned artificial contraceptive methods. During the world synod of bishops held at the Vatican last October cardinals and bishops told the Pope that his ruling had cuased severe shock waves. They urged him in the future to act in closer collaboration with them.

Pope Paul later ran into more opposition to his teachings. The Dutch Pastoral Council overwhelmingly voted to recommend that priests be allowed to marry and continue functioning as priests. At one point in the controversy between Rome and Holland, it appeared many Dutch priests and Roman Catholics were on the verge of chism.

QUESTION DOCTRINE

Recently some theologians have even begun to question the doctrine of papal infallibility endorsed by the first Vatican council in 1869.

On the centennial of the proclamation, last Dec. 8, Pope Paul praised the pronouncement of Vatican I as a "clear and final" dogma. However, since Vatican I the infallibility formula has been used only once: in 1950 Pius XII proclaimed the dogma of the bodily assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary into Heaven.

he troubles of Pope Paul result mostly from the widely varying interpretations given his pronouncements. Conservative churchmen sometimes say these are just a hairline away from an infallible ruling, while some liberals describe them as mere suggestions.

Pope Paul now is planning and writing speeches for the longest trip of his seven-year reign—to the Philippines and Australia in November.

Ahead also lie months of rigorous planning for the third world synod of bishops, in autumn 1971. Many bishops are expected to exert pressure for the inclusion of both birth control and priestly celibacy on the

DEAR ABBY . . .

Hiking Hitches

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl with a problem. What is wrong with a girl hitchhiking a ride somewhere? It's cheaper and a lot quicker than a bus and I really don't see anything wrong with it, yet I've had nice looking men pick me up in big air-conditioned late model cars and lecture me on the dangers of a girl hitchhiking. I can take care of myself as well as any boy my age who hitches a ride.

Lots of people will pick up boys, no matter how greasy and hoody they look, but they shake their heads and pass up a couple of girls. Why? — Minnesota Girl.

DEAN MINN.: Because it's a common misconception that the female is physically weaker, and therefore more helpless than the male.

A girl should never get into a car with a stranger—no matter how "nice" the car or the driver looks. You can't tell anything by looking.

Also, a driver who picks up a hitchhiker, male or female, is taking a big chance. Nice looking kids have been known to rob, rape and murder drivers who have picked them up.

I cannot stress too strongly the risks of hitchhiking. It is against the law in many places, and I think it should be against the law everywhere.

DEAR ABBY: Here's a new one for you. My ex-husband passed away recently. We had been divorced for six years and didn't live together for two years before that. Neither of us married again if that makes any difference. Our relationship was far from cordial after we parted, and all our friends knew it.

Two idiots I know sent me sympathy cards!

Should I acknowledge them? Or do you think they were trying to be funny? — No Tears.

DEAR NO: Don't assume they are trying to be funny. Maybe they were serious. Acknowledge them.

DEAR ABBY: While vacationing with my wife in Whittier, Cal., I was standing in front of their finest hotel minding my own business when a new, shiny luxury car pulled up. A nicely dressed middle-aged couple got out of the front, and a very lovely lady got out back. The couple went into the hotel and the lovely young lady walked right up to me, looked me straight in the eye and said, "I want a man!"

I said, "Thank you for the compliment, but although I may appear to be about 50 or so, I am 75 years old and I am afraid I would be a big disappointment to you."

She quickly lost interest in me and approached another man.

I am now 89 years old, and this lady has been on my mind ever since. What do you suppose this lady's game was? Do you think if I went back to Whittier I could locate her!—Still Wondering.

DEAR STILL: Your chances for locating the woman are very slim. It's anybody's guess as to what her 'game' was. Maybe she just wanted a man.

DEAR ABBY: Your are a dandy. How I wish you had been around to okay my expense account when I was a salesman. Shame on you for buying that story about the senior prom costing the kid from Bremerton, Washington, $50 when the girl supplied the tickets! Wow! If he spent $10 for a "nosegay," his girl would have looked like a walking casket.

He said he spent $10 for "something to eat afterwards where all the kids hang out." And in Bremerton, Washington, yet! Why, his tab at Chicago's Pump Room for anything they could legally serve a high school kid wouldn't cost half that. — Realistic.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Doctor and Patient Labored Together

WINNIPEG (CP) — Doctors and patient shared a common bond — both were in labor.

The story is told by Dr. Sheila Rothstein and Mrs. Fred Miller, her patient.

Dr. Rothstein was in mild labor Sept. 4 when she went to Misericordia Hospital to check on Mrs. Miller. When she found that her patient was likely to give birth within a few hours, she stayed — even though she was feeling contractions herself.

Mrs. Miller gave birth to a daughter at 6 p.m.

Dr. Rothstein paid a brief visit home, packed, and returned to the hospital, where she gave birth to a boy 12½ hours later.

Easy Scotch Treats

They are easy to eat too, and are just the sort of thing to please youngsters when they come home from school.

It takes just three ingredients and two easy steps to make these confections. Scotch Treats features crisp read-to-eat rice cereal coated with a blend of melted butterscotch morsels and peanut butter. For an extra-special dessert, make a fancy fruit cup using seasonally fresh fruits and serve in orange shells.

SCOTCH TREATS

1 cup (6-oz. pkg.) butterscotch morsels

½ cup peanut butter

3 cups rice cereal

1. Melt butterscotch morsels and peanut butter over hot, but not boiling, water; stir until well blended. Remove from heat. Add cereal and stir until well coated.

2. Drop by level tablespoons onto waxed paper or buttered baking sheets or press into buttered 9x9-inch pan. Let stand in cool place until firm.

Food Outlook For September

The Canadian Department of Agriculture predicts the following trends in food prices for the month of September:

PORK: With supplies increasing, prices are expected to weaken.

BEEF: With supply and demand almost balancing, little change in prices can be expected.

EGGS: Adequate supplies with prices advancing seasonally.

POULTRY MEAT: Chickens and broiler turkeys will be in ample supply with little change expected in prices. Heavy turkeys will be in adequate supply at steady prices.

APPLES: Supply less than last year but above average. Prices may increase.

PEACHES: Supplies about same as last year in East. Prices will hold fairly steady in East but may drop in the West.

GRAPES: Ontario crop down, prices will likely be higher than last year in the East and lower in the West.

PEARS: Supplies are down and Eastern prices will be higher than last year.

POTATOES: Late summer supplies are about same as last year. Prices will remain steady.

TOMATOES: Supplies will be slightly lower than last year with prices continuing about the same.

ONIONS: Supplies will be higher in the East and about the same in the West. Eastern prices may remain below last year.

Abortion Information Service

'Letting Women Know . . . So THEY Can Choose'

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

An abortion information service has been opened in Victoria by Elizabeth murrison, who began her campaign for abortion reform last winter, and social worker Dorothy Livingston.

The object of the 24-hour telephone service is to provide information which, although available from other sources, is often hard to find.

"We are trying to help women who have been refused abortions in Victoria find a legal alternative to either an unwanted baby, and subsequent mental and financial problems, or a possibly-deformed baby after dangerous butchery by a back-alley quack."

Mrs. Murrison's determination to set up an abortion information service is the result of all the phone calls received since she began her campaign for abortion reform last winter.

I feel I can't just sit by while so many women are desperately in need of help and advice which doctors seem reluctant to give," Mrs. Murrsion said.

One of her phone calls was from a middle-aged woman who admitted she "thoroughly disapproved of my campaign and thought I was a dreadful woman — until she found herself pregnant."

The woman, a grandmother, had financial worries and was training to start a career. She wanted to let Mrs. Murrison know she had changed her mind about the necessity for abortions in certain cases.

Mrs. Murrison has been collecting and tabulating information about abortion laws since she was refused an abortion last year.

She has found that Canadian abortion laws are interpreted much more liberally in Vancouver than in Victoria.

Oregon State laws make abortions possible to any women who has made the decision — and has $500 plus fare.

Japan's medical fees are lower, but the fare is over $1,000. New York and European countries with liberalized abortion laws are even more expensive. U.S. medical fees must be paid in cash.

Mrs. Murrison emphasizes that the service is in no way "procuring abortions."

"We provide the information and give help and advice, but we do not make any arrangements for anyone."

All clinics and doctors on her confidential list are legally qualified to accept patients for abortions.

"No one will have access to the files but me, not even Mrs. Livingston."

Mrs. Murrison is hoping that Victoria doctors who believe in a more liberalized interpretation of federal abortion laws will get in touch with her.

She feels that doctors should stop being so cautious, and give women a chance to have their cases presented to the hospital board for a decision.

At present she has found a tendency on the part of doctors to discourage women, saying they wouldn't have a chance of getting the board's approval.

"This may be partly the woman's fault.

If, in spite of being in emotional turmoil, she steels herself to present her case calmly and rationally, the doctor may take this controlled panic at face value.

"So if you're upset, act upset, Don't try to hide it," Mrs. Murrison advises.

Theoretically, it is possible for a woman to argue her own case for terminating pregnancy before the board, but Mrs. Murrison doesn't know of any one who has tried.

The information service is free, but Mrs. Murrison admits she would "very much like donations from anyone who can afford to help."

"We've started with very little money, so even a small donation would help pay the telephone bill.

"Eventually it would be wonderful if we could do something to help women who are destitute but are still refused abortions. I don't think anyone in the low income group should be refused an abortion if she wants it"

ELIZABETH MURRISON: "I can't just sit by . . ."

Principal Named For Indian School

By DOREEN HUNTER

Sister Terry Lewis of the California-based Order of the Immaculate Heart is the newly-appointed principal of the Tsartlip Indian Day School in Brentwood.

She takes the place of Sister Margaret Sitton, also of the Immaculate Heart Order, who resigned her position as principal last term to take up the post of counsellor on Salt Spring Island.

The Tsartlip school is the only Indian school in the province not to fall in line with federal government policy of closing down in favor of public schools, and will function under the direction of a school board composed of members from Saaninch Peninsula reserves.

Sister Terry, who received her Bachelor of Arts degree at the Immaculate Heart University in Los Angeles and attended summer session this year at the University of Victoria, has taught at the Tsartlip school for three years.

She and Sister Norma Crews, who is entering her fifth year of teaching at the school, are two of nine members in the province of the religious order, which recently introduced sweeping changes in its community life.

Rounding out the teaching staff will be Miss Florence Phau, formerly of Vancouver, who will teach Division I, levels 1 and 2, and Miss Ann Ritz, of Victoria, who will teach Division II, levels 3 to 6. Sister Norma Crews will teach Division III, levels 7 to 11.

Also for the first time, a class of 21 pre-schoolers will be taught on the East Saanich reserve by Mrs. Adelyne Claxton, who this year qualified for a teacher's certificate in pre-school education.

The federal government will continue to support the three-room school which serves the four Indian reserves on the Saanich Peninsula.

It has ordered the construction of a portable classroom to ease overcrowding this year of a high enrolment of 94 students. It will accommodate 24 pupils and is scheduled for completion in October.

Bilingualism Meant Headaches

MONTREAL (CP) — Parents of English-speaking school children in suburban Dorval had a lot of headaches this summer but they got the job done. They set up their own French summer school. 2 The main cause of their headaches was the lack of money.

Nevertheless, the 235 parents dipped into their own pockets to give their children lessons in another language.

The idea for a French summer school germinated last spring following some complaints that French programs in local schools were "inadequate."

Separate two-week programs were set up after the local school boards denied parents a request for a $4,650 subsidy for French courses.

So the parents paid $15 each.

Although only two qualified French teachers of the local board were available for the job, a bit of sleuthing produced six more.

One of the teachers, Frank Appugliese, said he tried to create an atmosphere as "unlike school as possible."

One teacher emphasized that the program was iriginated with younger students "because we feel the kids at that age absorb facts like little sponges."

Now the parents are worrying about next summer. The cost per parent is too hith and they wonder if such an interprise could be sponsored by the government.

"After all," they say "the government wants to promote French as much as anybody."

HOME GARDEN

Hard to Classify, Easy to Grow

By HILDA BEASTALL

A fall flower hard to classify yet easy to grow, lovely to look at and capable of perfuming the air for yards around is noticed occasionally in flower shows. Acidanthera bicolor, variety Murielae came into cultivation from Abyssinia at the end of the 19th century.

Hilda

First introduced as a fragrant gladiolus, it was known later as Abyssinian Sword-lily, a recognized common name for it today.

The plant is cormous-rooted like a gladiolus, so cannot be classified as a perennial. Numerous tiny cormels are produced each year, amounting to several dozen so that it is hard to know why more acidantheras are not seen.

In growth the similarity to gladioli is apparent, though the whole plant is daintier and more refined. Leaves grow to about 30 inches before the sheath separates to allow the spike of blossoms to emerge and elongate to flowering.

The creamy white blossoms, several to a spike in rather loose formation, are three to four inches across, the lower petals each with a crimson purple blotch at its base.

In the early part of this century, acidantheras were considered suitable only for growing in greenhouses, but later as gardeners in North America became familiar with them it was found they would flower well outdoors from corms planted in late April or early May.

Here in Victoria we find the corms will grow quicky in warm sandy soil from an ealy May planting and flowess can be expected about the end of August.

In cooler areas or where soil is heavier and therefore still wet and cold late into spring, we start corms of acidanthera in pots of sandy compost in either a covered coldframe or sunporch in April.

Then by June, with warmer temperatures and resulting warmer soil, the contents of the pots are planted without disturbance in the garden.

A sunny corner or border where fall sunshine lingers is ideal. Among low growing shrubs is good, but let it be near a much used path or near the outdoor coffee table, where fragrance will be most appreciated.

The leaves must be allowed to remain intact after cutting off the faded flower spike. Dig the corms by the end of October and store them in a dry warm place much the same as gladiolus corms.

The tiny cormels will all flower in three years, each bearing exactly the same type of flowers as the parent corms.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

On a transcontinental flight some years ago, the pilot switched on the intercom and spoke to the passengers:

"Ladies and gentlemen, may I have your attention. I have two announcements to make. One is good news and the other bad. I'll give you the bad news first.

"Our radar and automatic pilot have ceased to function; and we could be considered as lost. And now for the good news. During the past hour, flying at 38,000 feet, we have just broken the world's speed record."

By analogy, with respect to the game of bridge, victories are not won by the swiftest, for speed pays no dividends when one has lost control of the situation.

The hand presented today illustrates the above point. In the deal, our South declarer played too hurriedly to the first trick — and from that moment on, he was lost.

South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Declarer promptly won the opening spade lead with his ace, after which he led a diamond, dummy's 10 being captured by East's ace. East now made a nice shift to the heart jack, which was permitted to win. The continuation of the heart 10 was overtaken by West's queen, the trick being won by dummy's ace.

Declarer now took the club finesse, which lost to West's king. West then cashed two heart tricks, to hand declarer a one-trick set.

Declarer committed a grievous error when he captured the opening spade lead with his ace, instead of with the queen, for East now knew that South had started with the A-K-Q of spades. The reason? West's lead of the spade jack had denied the queen. Hence South was marked with the queen, and also the king, for otherwise why would South have won the trick with the ace when he could have won it with the queen?

Thus East perceived the futility of returning a spade when he won East's diamond lead at trick two. If South had taken the first trick with the spade queen, East might have assumed that West's spade suit was headed by an A-J-10 or a K-L-10 combination — and he might have played back a spade instead of the "killing" jack of hearts.

Singing Clinic Held

The Island's first barber shop singing clinic and novice quartet competition was held Saturday at Sanscha Hall, Sidney.

More than 100 members of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America (SPEBSQSA) attended the event. Hosts were the Victoria Village Squires.

Keynote speaker was MacHuff of Kenosha, Wis., musical services assistant to the international society.

Winners in Saturday night competitions were the Memory Four of Burnaby, Big Wheel Trophy; and the Maimed Four of Victoria, Hub Cup for novices.

ROMEO SPENDS 4 HOURS STUCK FAST

HUDIKSVALL, Sweden (UPI) — Police had to rescue a man who became stuck in a garbage chute of an apartment house.

Detectives said the man, who was not identified, was unable to get to his girlfriend on the third floor by ordinary means because he had no key—so he tried the garbage chute.

He was freed after four hours.

Susan watched the two men finish a game. "No more chess tonight," she said. "Coffee's ready, and you've neglected me all evening. Who won?"

"We both did," Jack replied. "Peter didn't win in half the games we played, and I didn't win in two thirds of them. We drew one game."

How many games did they play?

(Answer Wednesday)

Monday's answer: Ted answered 29 questions right, 11 wrong.

HURRICANES ILLEGAL, BUT TELL THEM THAT

GULF SHORES, Ala. (AP) — A 1957 town ordinance makes it unlawful "for any hurricane to enter in, upon, across or over the corporate limits of the Town of Gulf Shores, its police jurisdiction, or the air space above it."

The penalty on conviction is a fine of $1 to $100 or six months at hard labor.

Comeback Hoped For Desert Sheep

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Conservationists are working to achieve a comeback for some rare ice age relics most people never heard of: the desert bighorn sheep.

Only about 3,900 of the magnificent animals, members of a family that once roamed the entire American West, still linger amid lonely California crags.

A co-ordinated effort is under way by state and federal wildlife agencies and conservation groups to find and count them, preserve their dwindling water holes, protect them from ever-expanding civilization and reintroduce them into areas where once they flourished.

Amazing beasts, they can go five days without water amid a blazing Death Valley summer.

PROTECTED BY LAW

Travellers on mountain or desert highways occasionally see them bounding away, difficult to distinguish as their tawny hair blends with the background.

Bighorns have been protected by California law, since 1873, and despite their scarcity, one herd estimated at 300 roams within 40 miles of Los Angeles city hall on the high peakes of the San Gabriel range.

Most of the bands dwells in the remote desert ranges from Death Valley southward.

Bighorns are believed to have migrated from Mongolia into Siberia and across the Bering Straits into Alaska, then down as far as Mexico as the last ice age waned 12,000 years ago.

An estimated two million once ranged east to the Black Hills of North Dakota, to Missouri and West Texas.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. Edna George and Family wish to thank all our friends and relatives for their deep consideration and sympathy shown to us in our sad tragedy and loss of my late husband and father Frank George. Special thanks to the pallbearers, the Canadian Scottish Legion branch; and to Chief Victor Underwood, Ed Underwood and Chief John Albany. Many thanks to our good friends and relatives who travelled here from the United States to pay their last respects to our late Mr. George. Thank you all for the lovely floral tributes, sympathy cards and financial support. The gratitude and appreciation in our hearts can never be fully expressed. Thank you.

9 IN MEMORIAM

McMILLAN — In loving memory of dearest husband and father, Ronald McMillan who passed away Sept. 15, 1968.

In life you were very dear to us
In death you are just as dear
Every day no matter where Deep in our hearts you are always there.

TURCOTTE—In loving memory of my husband, Reg, who passed away Sept. 15, 1969.

The pearly gates were opened,
A gentle voice said, "Come,"
And with farewell unspoken,
He gently entered home.

—Always remembered by his wife Betty.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

NANCY. 6 p.m., Channel 2. This is the first show of the series . . . Adam Hudson, a veterinarian, meets Nancy Smith, daughter of the president of the United States. And to make the series work through a minimum of 26 episodes, love must bloom. It does.

THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Season's Premiere.) Ninth season kickoff in a new time slot finds the Clampetts worried about pollution. Jed and his clan plan to withdraw 95 million dollars from banker Drysdale's vaults, fly to Washington, D.C., and thrust the wad into the hands of the President to help beat the environmental problem. Drysdale pushes the panic button, hiring ventriloquist Rich Little to impersonate the President and tell the Clampetts everything is under control, with unexpected results. Fans of the series will be entertained.

THE DON KNOTTS SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Premiere.) Multi-Emmy winner Don Knotts makes his solo variety bow and anyone who might want to exclaim, "Why Don Knotts?" might well recall that Don started as a sketch comic with Steve Allen, in the first place. The show has some extremely funny moments, so comedy fans tune in. For one thing, guest Tony Newley is used magnificently and he and Don almost come off as a team.

GREEN ACRES. 8 p.m., Channel 7. (Season's Premiere.) Flourishing without children for five years, this rural comedy series undergoes a slight shift this fall in its new time slot, introducing nine-year-old Victoria Meyerink, a cute youngster remembered as a guest on Danny Kaye's knee, who catches Lisa Dougals' fancy. The little girl turns up with three underprivileged city boys, visiting the Douglases to learn about "life on the farm," and causes a sleeping quarters' problem while captivating Mrs. Douglas.

RED SKELTON. 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Dean Martin is on hand to introduce tonight's show, which features Raymond Burr and Barbara Anderson of Ironside. Burr plays an escaped convict and Barbara is his moll, in Freddie's Desperate Hour. They try to hide out in Freddie's skid road shack.

TELESCOPE. 8:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Donald Sutherland, the Canadain actor who is making an international name for himself (MASH, Kelly's Heroes, Alex in Wonderland) is profiled.

HEE HAW. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. (Season's Premiere.) Nashville's hoedown takes on a western touch tonight with guests Roy Rogers and Dale Evans singing "Cowboy Camp Meeting," "Old-Time Religion," and "Daddy Sang Bass." Sunshine Cornsilk (Lisa Todd), an overgrown beauty, chases Junior Samples; the jug players compete with banjo pickers; and the huge cast of regulars from Minnie Pearl to Grandpa Jones carry on with old jokes and country rhythms, careful to keep their image unchanged.

MOVIE OF THE WEEK. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "The Immortal." (1969.) (Repeat.) This original if far-fetched story is the pilot film for an upcoming series which debuts Thursday, September 24. Christopher George plays a youthful, fortyish, test driver-mechonic who discovers he has a unique blood type which slows down his aging pocess almost to a halt and keeps him from contracting diseases. All of this comes out when his aged boss, millionaire tycoon Barry Sullivan, receives a transfusion of George's blood and feels temporarily rejuvenated, following which George becomes a hunted man. The production is first-rate and Barry Sullivan is a standout as the wealthy old man who can't face dying at any cost.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Through the years, every so often I read case reports, usually of women or children who were brought into hospitals, obviously very ill, but with a very puzzling disease.

Then, on taking a good history, it was learned that the patients, enthusiasts on vitamins, had for months been taking enormous doses of perhaps vitamin A or D, and that was the cause of what looked like a severe disease of the brain. On taking away the trouble-making vitamin, the patients generally started to recover.

I just read of a six-year-old girl brought into a hospital with the diagnosis of a probable brain injury. The mother stated that the girl, since she was 18 months old, had been receiving from 400,000 to 625,000 units of vitamin A every week. The girl was apathetic and pale and had inflammation of her tongue and bleeding lips. She also had a large liver which was found to be badly damaged.

The doctors treating her, Drs. E. Rubin, A. Florman, T. Degnan and J. Diaz, of New York City, reported recently that in the last year, the girl has improved significantly, now that she is not being stuffed with cod liver oil.

Cases of this type should apprise people to the fact that most vitamins will do their work in extremely small doses, and as with many other drugs, large doses can do great harm. For instance, a person with a primary (pernicious) anemia can often be kept healthy with one very tiny dose of vitamin B12, given once a month. As I often say to a vitamin faddist, a vitamin is much like a key to my front door; when I have one in my pocket, that is enough. For me to carry 10 more such keys would not do me any good and would not be necessary.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association recently was a report on electronic air cleaners. The person who suffers much from hay fever, or perhaps from asthma, can often gain great comfort from getting one of these apparatuses that can go in a window and clean the air that comes into the room.

Dr. J. T. Siedlecki of Chiacgo thinks the best and by far the most efficient electronic air cleaner is one in which there are two parts: 1) an electronic field puts a positive charge on the tiny particles, like pollens, entering the room in the air; 2) a cavity in which there is one grounded and one positive plate. The grounded plate attracts and holds certain particles and cleans them out of the air entering the room from outside.

U Thant Urges Hijacker Court

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant stepped outside the UN Monday night to call for an international tribunal to try aerial hijackers.

In a speech to the UN Association of the United States, the Secretary-General said:

"It is high time that we go to the root of this phenomenon and treat its causes with novel remedies and not with old-time recipes to which it is largely immune."

Observers greeted the statement, delivered on the eve of the opening of the silver anniversary session of the 126-country General Assembly, with questions of how Thant's proposed tribunal could be formed.

The suggestion was stronger than anything Thant had said in his annual report to the General Assembly, on aerial hijacking or anything else.

REFLECTS CONCERN

This report, released earlier Monday, expressed cautious optimism in the world situation, including the Middle East, and made a veiled call for a Big Four summit conference on the Middle East.

Thant's speech in New York reflected the deep concern felt in much of the world over the Middle East situation in general and the question of aerial hijacking in particular.

But the fact that he made the statement outside the UN is considered an indication of the scant progress expected on the subject of hijacking in the next three months here.

This is despite the fact that Thant speculated in his annual report that this assembly will see the greatest collection of heads of state in history.

These leaders will be here for the 25th anniversary commemoration ceremonies in October. It is expected that President Nixon of the U.S. and Premier Alexei Kosygin of the Soviet Union will be here.

There has been no announcement about the attendance of Prime Minister Trudeau, but he is expected to attend.

'FANTASTIC' WIN AGAINST SEAS

HONOLULU (UPI) — The U.S. Coast Guard today termed the survival of two men and a woman after a two-month fight on the high seas as "really fantastic."

Nearly starved and burned raw by sun and wind, the trio was picked up by the supply ship Niagara Falls Monday after drifting aimlessly in a 45-foot sloop named Galilee.

They were identified as Julian Ritter, Loren Louise Kokx and Win Heiringhoff. Ritter was identified as the skipper of the sailboat, of Santa Barbara. He told his rescuers that the Galilee's food supply ran out July 27.

The Galilee had been the object of a Pacific-wide search since early August when friends of the sailors reported they were then two weeks overdue on a voyage from Tahiti to Honolulu.

They were found 600 miles northwest of Honolulu, meaning they overshot their destination by hundreds of miles.

The Coast Guard rescue centre here said the Galilee was hopelessly lost and it was a stroke of fate that the Niagara Falls happened by.

"How in the world they got over there we don't know. We're anxious to interview them when they return to Honolulu," a Coast Guard official said.

"The whole thing is really fantastic."

A navy doctor on the Niagara Falls reported the trio to be suffering from extreme exposure and dehydration.

Navymen with water pumps boarded the sailing vessel to bail her out and keep her afloat. Ritter was described as "in his 50s," Miss Kokx, 21, also is an American, and Heiringhoff is from West Germany.

The survivors are expected to arrive in Honolulu Thursday aboard either the Niagara Falls or a Coast Guard cutter.

Passengers 'Don't Mind' Air Checks

LONDON (AP) — Passengers in Europe seem undisturbed by newly tightened anti-hijack measures in most international airline terminals. Some even say they're reassured by the time-consuming methods.

"They can take all day as far as I'm concerned," British golfer Max Faulkner said as he waited to have his baggage searched in London's Heathrow Airport. "As long as the aircraft is safe."

At Heathrow, 300 uniformed police have been supplemented by more than 100 plainclothes detectives and airline private investigators in the anti-hijack battle.

Rooftop observation decks have been closed. Police stop and search cars in the airport area and question their drivers.

"All checks are good ones," said London businessman Neil Fisher as he passed through an x-ray detection device at Heathrow. As he spoke, the machine's alarm bell rang, and a swift search through the overnight bag of a passing airline pilot revealed a metal whisky flask.

At Zurich's Kloten Intercontinental Airport, all passengers have to go through a triple police check. Women are searched by hostesses or female detectives.

At Frankfurt, officials say travellers are accepting more stringent controls and delays of up to 45 minutes without complaint.

At Orly Airport outside Paris, special police squads stop passengers at random in the departure lounge, where travellers have already passed customs and police checks. Police armed with sub-machine-guns guard aircraft day and night. Israeli and Arab planes are followed by a police car when they land.

In Copenhagen, security checks on Israeli airlines and flights to Tel Aviv have been tightened and extended. Electronic devices are being used in Copenhagen and Brussels to check passengers for hidden arms.

BAGPIPERS SET RECORD

STEVENAGE, England (UPI) — The national record for non-stop bagpipe playing has been broken, Stevenage pipe band officials said. They said the Stevenage's 10-hour, two-minute non-stop playing beats the 9½-hour record set in May in London.

Civil Defence Turns Civil

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Emergency Measures Organization, long pointed almost totally towards planning for a nuclear disaster, has embarked on a new program of preparedness to meet peacetime civil emergencies.

The revised approach came to life last week at a seminar of federal and provincial emergency planning officials at the civil defence college in nearby Arnprior, Ont.

A paper presented to the two-day seminar by J. F. Wallace, director-general of EMO's national survival and recovery program, proposed what is called a new national objective:

"To develop throughout the nation non-military plans and preparations for responding to emergencies caused by internal or external threats to the social, political or economic structure of Canada."

Stuart (Tubby) White, EMO director-general of long-range planning, told the conference that while the threat of nuclear war has not been eliminated, civil threats to Canada should take precedence over the threat of war.

CITES EXAMPLES

In the term threat, he included "anything which tends to create instability in our social, political or economic structure." Among the non-military examples he cited were both civil disorders and natural disasters.

Copies of some of the papers presented at the closed seminar became available to The Canadian Press Monday. EMO officials said that what Mr. Wallace called "a shift in emphasis on . . . the order of priorities as between the external and internal threats" received solid backing from provincial rpresent atives.

C. R. Patterson, national co-ordinator of civil emergency measures, said in an interview Monday this did not represent a reduction of the organization's responsibility to plan against nuclear disaster.

"We are trying to give more positive direction to having a total emergency response rather than a total wartime emergency response with a peacetime spinoff."

Mr. White said Monday that EMO's role as co-ordinator of federal emergency activities will not change. However, instead of waiting until called upon by civil authorities, EMO officials in the provinces will take the initiative in making the organization's services available in emergency situations.

REFERS TO SUDBURY

Mr. Wallace said last month's destructive windstorm in and around Sudbury, Ont., pointed up the need for more adequate warning of peacetime emergencies.

An example of the type of emergency planning which the organization hopes to develop in the future was carried out last April in British Columbia, when the U.S. Army was planning to send a shipment of nerve gas through the Strait of Juan de Fuca from Okinawa.

Under EMO auspices, federal and provincial officials plus a number of scientific experts met to consider what steps should be taken in the unlikely event that the shipment should meet with disaster going through the strait.

A detailed plan for protection of the public, with special instructions for groups like farmers and fishermen, was ready for distribution by the provincial civil defence co-ordinator when U.S. military authorities called off the shipment under pressure of public opinion.

On the nuclear planning side, the emergency organization is chiefly concerned as it has been for many years with devising a national fallout shelter program.

HAD PILOT PROJECT

A pilot project carried out at Granby, Que., earlier this year resulted in the identification of 79 buildings that can be used for shelters should a nuclear attack occur. A map distributed to citizens shows where the shelters are and the number each will accommodate.

In Ontario, a province-wide program is under way aimed at determining the amount of emergency accommodation that would be available in a wartime disaster.

In Alberta, Lethbridge is being used as a pilot centre for a possible province-wide community shelter plan.

EMO officials hope that the federal government eventually will approve a national policy for community fallout shelters.

Ontario Police Feted by Man, Inquiry Told

TORONTO (CP) — Elizabeth Citron testified Monday she had been told that Ontario Provincial Police personnel used a Montreal hotel suite maintained by George Clinton Duke, who, she said, once threatened her life.

She also said she was told the OPP men vacationed in Duke's apartment at Freeport in the Bahamas.

Mrs. Citron, a Burlington, Ont., dress designer, said Duke once threatened her with "the cement-shoe treatment" and said he would be "800 miles away when it happened."

She was testifying on the opening day of an inquiry by Mr. Justice Campbell Grant of the Ontario Supreme Court into allegations by Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, that senior OPP officers were associating with criminal elements.

Mrs. Citron, who said she became a fast friend of Mrs. Duke after designing dresses for her, said Mrs. Duke asked her on at least two occasions to accompany her to Montreal for a visit to Expo 67.

"She mentioned that members of the Burlington police force had been staying there and OPP," said Mrs. Citron.

FIRST IGNORED THREAT

Mrs. Citron, who later laid a complaint against Duke, said she first laughed off his threat to "have me fixed" but began to worry when Mrs. Duke told her he had entertained gangsters at their home. She said Mrs. Duke named them as Red LeBarre and Johnny Papalia.

Mrs. Citron said she was told by Mrs. Duke that Duke had friends on the local and provincial police forces.

"Months later, she told me: 'Clinton is openly entertaining those gangsters at the plant now, in front of the staff'."

Mrs. Citron said she had met OPP Superintendent Albert Wilson at several parties at the Duke home and had been told by Mrs. Duke that Staff Supt. A. M. Rodger also was a frequent visitor. The two are under suspension.

They face charges of disobeying orders to stop associating with Duke and their trial has been postponed until completion of the inquiry.

Mrs. Citron testified that Duke once drew a revolver and threatened to kill her unless she stopped seeing his wife. She said Duke told her it would be useless to go to the police.

MADE BOAST

She said he showed her an OPP pin he was wearing and boasted that he had arranged for the transfer of a constable to Kapuskasing, Ont., after the officer picked him up on an impaired driving charge.

She said that later Duke apologized and promised not to bother her again, but he began driving past her door three days later. She finally laid a complaint of threatening her when he telephoned six weeks later and again threatened to kill her.

The case was heard last December and Duke was prohibited from possessing firearms outside his home and ordered to keep the peace for six months and post bond of $2,000.

Harvey Daiter, counsel for Mr. Duke, argued unsuccessfully that the inquiry should be halted on the grounds it could be prejudicial to a libel case involving his client.

He also argued that the inquiry was outside the jurisdiction of the legislature and should be carried out by the OPP commissioners.

When Mr. Justice Grant disagreed with him, Mr. Daiter served notice of application for a restraining order from the Appeal Court. Mr. Justice Grant said he would continue the hearings unless the Appeal Court rules otherwise.

Mrs. Citron said Mrs. Duke told her of beatings received from her husband—"sometimes twice in the same night"—and that she was terrified of her husband and acquaintances of his who were gangsters.

She said that on one occasion Mrs. Duke had driven her past the home of LeBarre in Burlington, telling her: "I want you to see his home in case anything happens to me."

Bomb Defused At U.S. Plant

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Terrorists set fire to the office of a United States firm Monday night and tried to bomb a transmitting plant of International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Police said some men entered the transmitting plant, tied up an employee and set a time bomb. But the employee freed himself and called police, who de-fused the bomb.

VICTORIA DAILY NEWSPAPERS

The 1971 compacts from Chrysler are here!

For years Chrysler has been building and selling some of Canada's most popular compact cars. Last year alone, over 40% of all compact sales were Chrysler-built cars.

It's '71—and Chrysler steps up the action! This year, Dodge and Plymouth dealers have six new compact cars. What a choice! And each one has been designed and built with the Extra Care in Engineering that Chrysler is famous for. All with all-welded, all-steel Unibody construction for extra strength; all with Torsion-Aire suspension for a smooth, stable and safe ride.

CHRYSLER

DUSTER

This is the hot one! . . . The style-leader for '71! Lean, tough and as muscular as you want to make it. Up to 340 cubes. That's a sports package in itself . . . Duster 340. New sporty paint and tape treatments, new rally instrument cluster and wild new options like rear deck spoiler and stereo radio and cassette player.

Duster and Duster 340. Sport compacts with plenty of muscle . . . at down-to-earth prices.

SCAMP

The newest member of the Valiant family. It's a smart 2-door hardtop that's as full of fun and value as its name. Dress it up the way you like, to fit your budget: vinyl roof, bucket seats, stereo tape system and your choice of 225 six or 318 V-8 power. For value with style, you can't beat Scamp.

Scamps will move out fast. So if you don't see one right away, be patient. It's worth waiting for. Scamp. The sporty Valiant.

VALIANT

Nobody's ever beaten Valiant for value. And for '71 the values are even better. It's still loaded with room, comfort and economy. Valiant brings you the comforts of a big car, with the added benefits of a small car. Four-door convenience, vacation-size trunk, sure-fire six or V-8 engines that use regular fuel, plus an impeccable reputation for quality make Valiant the buy-word when it comes to compacts.

Dodge delivers:

DEMON

The newest members of the Dodge compact family. Demon and the devilish Demon 340. Priced way down there. But with more than enough looks, power and options to justify the Sports Coupe title. If you're leaning towards a compact with spirit, make it a Demon. It's got room for five, a big trunk, torsion-bar suspension and a rattle-free unibody. Demon's performance lives up to its name.

SWINGER

Swinger is better than ever for '71! Swinger comes on in a 2-door hardtop style that's hard to beat. And you get a choice of power, from a thrifty 198 six to a potent 318 V-8. And all run on regular gas. Make your Swinger as jazzy as you want with bucket seats, vinyl roof, stereo tape system, the works. Swinger. One of the sweetest little sports hardtops that ever hit the road. Swing a little.

DART

Here's a car that makes a lot of sense to a lot of people. A solid, dependable 4-door sedan that carries on the Dodge tradition of reliability. Big enough to take the whole family and their luggage, yet still as economical and easy to handle as a compact should be. With power options that include a 318 V-8 that uses regular fuel, it's not surprising that Dart makes sense. If you're looking for a 4-door sedan that's big on value, Dart is for you.

Bids Asked On Shipyard Property

A prospective buyer of the land and assets of McKay-Cormack shipyard in James Bay has 30 days in which to make an acceptable offer to take the company out of receivership.

Receiver-manager Gordon F. McClary said there is hope the yard will be sold outright and meanwhile, negotiations have proceeded involving outside financial interests.

McClary, appointed earlier this year to settle the affairs of McKay-Cormack Ltd., said it would be preferred that bidders tender on the entire unit of lands, buildings and equipment.

The company advertised Monday that bids would be accepted in accordance with a B.C. Supreme Court order up to 1 p.m. Oct. 15 for the assets of McKay-Cormack Ltd. These consist of three parcels of land at 130 Kingston Street, plus the buildings, equipment, machinery and stock-in-trade.

In its 1968 annual report, McKay-Cormack reported fixed assets at a book value of $730,071, which represented the cost price after depreciation, except for the land value.

In 1961 the land was re-appraised and given an increased value of $93,000.

MARKET SUMMARIES

GM Strike Hits Prices

Bad news rained on Wall Street today as prices declined on a broad front in moderate trading. Under pressure from New York the Toronto market also posted a loss after opening with marginal advances.

The United Auto Workers strike against General Motors created the biggest setback at New York. Analysts said the effects could be most disturbing if it continued more than 10 weeks.

AT TORONTO in industrials, Dome Pete was down 2½ to $60½, Occidental Pete 1⅝ to $20½, Investors Overseas 1¼ to $5¼, Maclean-Hunter 1 to $9½ and Metropolitan Stores 1 to $25.

Canada Cement LaFarge rose 1¼ to $34¼, Union Carbide 1 to $14½, Noranda ¼ to $27⅞ and Bell ¼ to $43¼.

Rio Algom lost ⅛ to $16½, Patino ½ to $33, Yellowknife Bear 35 cents to $5.60, International Mogul 30 cents to $9.45 and Bethlehem ¼ to $15⅛. Silverfields rose 20 cents to $2.20.

The largest individual declines were among senior mines and oils. Dome Petroleum fell $3 on $60½ on a 400-share trade and Union Oil $1 to $35 on a 100-share transaction. Falconbridge declined ¾ to 134¼ and Aquitaine ⅝ to $23. Inland Natural Gas advanced $1⅛ to $10⅝ on a 300-share trade.

Among speculative mining issues on the Canadian Stock Exchange, Early Bird Mines was voluntarily suspended from trading until the company's shares cease to be in primary distribution.

AT LONDON British funds were firm on the stock market today. Industrials rallied after a dull start which was influenced by Wall Street's fall Monday and the General Motors strike.

Among Canadians, Dome, Massey-Ferguson, Hawker Siddeley and Central Del Rio moved lower. Hudson Bay Oil and Gas, Pacific Pete, Hiram Walker, Inco and Noranda advanced. Banks were firm.

GM and Amsai led U.S. issues lower.

AT VANCOUVER prices were lower in light pre-noon trading today as the stock exchange reported a volume of 979,588 shares to 11:24 a.m.

In the industrials, Driver Development dropped .03 to .47 on a volume of 7,400 shares. Tokar fell .05 to $2.55 and Block Bros. added .05 to $3.85.

Ponderay led the oils, falling .17 to $1.83 on 44,000 shares. Canarctic rose .04 to .68 and Stampede International fell .05 to $1.70.

In the mining section, Stannex rose .02 to .52 on 54,500 shares. Rolling Hills was off .01 to .56 and Croyden added .08 to .34.

Cons. Computer

Consolidated Computer Ltd. for the six-month period ended June 30th, recorded a loss of $1.99 million as compared with a loss of $352,145 for the same period last year.

The company now has installed, or ordered more than 600 Key-Edit key stations which, combined with time-sharing hardware sales, represent a sales value of more than $6.5 million. For the six months, sales were $199,000 against $63,200.

President Mers Kutt told shareholders: "Our present accounting method may not accurately reflect our financial performance, particularly with respect to the matching of revenues and expenses."

Giant Mascot

Giant Mascot Mines Ltd. in the nine months ended June 30 raised net profit to a record $1.3 million compared with $360,000 the year before. Performance was based on production income of $4.5 million, up $2.2 million, and cost of mining and administration of $2 million against $1.5 million.

Resumption of operations at the Hope mine, where fire destroyed surface buildings last month, is expected early in 1971. Exploration and development work continues meanwhile, said president L. P. Starck.

Great Pacific

A 15 per cent improvement in per share earnings is reported by Great Pacific Industries Ltd. for the six months ended June 30, or 23 cents against 20 cents.

W. J. Sleeman said operating revenue was $3.4 million against $2.7 million, and net earnings after full income tax calculation were $230,214 compared with $177,500.

Castle Oil

Gross income rose substantially and net income fell substantially in the first half of 1970 compared with the six months ended last Sept. 30, reports Castle Oil and Gas Ltd., of Calgary.

Income counting royalties rose from $8,674 to $13,154. Adding gain on disposal of assets brought the 1969 net to $124,513, compared with $4,724 this year, when no extra gain was included.

Castle still holds interests in potential producing areas of the Arctic, in Yukon Territory and off the East coast, president B. W. Watson said.

Canadian Javelin

Vancouver Stock Exchange Friday became the second North American exchange to list the shares of Canadian Javelin Ltd., which have been traded on the American Stock Exchange.

Describing itself as one of the top 10 Canadian natural resources firms, the company said there are about 15,000 shareholders. It has holdings in many parts of the western hemisphere and in Canada is engaged chiefly in mining, petroleum and forestry.

Brascan

Net income of Brascan Ltd. for the first half of 1970 is estimated at $34.9 million or $1.65 per share. This compares with $27.9 million or $1.32 in the same period last year.

Improvement in earnings is not expected to continue at the same rate for the whole year, said president J. H. Moore.

Real Estate Development Firm Formed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A worldwide real estate development company has been formed in Vancouver by Grosvenor Estates, a major British real estate firm, and Mobil Oil Corp. of New York, the companies announced here Monday.

The Vancouver-based company, Mobil Estates Ltd., is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Mobil Oil. Grosvenor will provide real estate consulting services with the objective of joint participation in large-scale projects.

President of Mobil Estates will be Gilbert J. Hardman, former president of Grosvenor International, which is engaged in development work in British Columbia.

Hardman said tht new company will be involved in the development of "large-scale real estate in all the free world communities."

It will be concerned with development of communities, recreational areas and industrial tracts rather than with the development of individual buildings, he said.

Trading Ban by Toronto Reduces Montreal Volume

MONTREAL (CP) — A Toronto Stock Exchange decision to prohibit its members from professional trading between Canadian exchanges is hurting volume on the Montreal exchanges, says Charles Neapole, president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges.

He told a news conference the Toronto action is bound to reduce volumes on both the Montreal and Toronto exchanges.

F. R. Whittall, chairman of the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, announced that a questionnaire is being sent to all members to "ascertain if in the opinion of members, professional trading bwtween exchanges was or was not in the public interest."

"Views may vary from one member to another but we would like to have a consensus from our members," said Whittall.

"I fail to see how the authorities in Toronto can claim that it is in the public interest not to have professional trading between exchanges in Canada and at the same time claim that it is in the public interest to have professional trading between Canadian exchanges and the New York Stock Exchange."

The Toronto rule became effective last week and has been interpreted as a retaliatory measure against a Quebec Securities Commission regulation asking brokers to trade on the Montreal market unless prices are better elsewhere.

Professional trading accounted from between 29 and 44 per cent of total volume on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges between January and August.

Arbitrage—trading of stocks to take advantage of the best price in other markets—exists in any sophisticated market in the world, said Whittall.

As price differentials develop between different markets, the professional trade will buy in one and sell in the other and vice-versa — depending on the situation. This has the effect of narrowing the spreads.

Major U.S. Bank Cuts Prime Rate to 7½%

NEW YORK (WP) — First Pennsylvania Bank of philadelphia announced Monday that its prime lending rate will be cut to 7½ per cent from 8 per cent, effective today, but the move triggered no similar steps among large banks here.

The prime rate is the interest that banks charge their biggest and best customers, virtually all large corporations. Essentially a short-term rate, it has stood at 8 per cent since last March 25, when it was lowered from the all-time record of a 8½ per cent.

First Pennsylvania, the largest bank in Philadelphia with assets of $2.5 billion, said it is cutting the rate because of "conditions in the market as well as in the company." Several smaller banks have announced prime rate cuts during the past few weeks.

Bankers here expressed surprise at the rate cut. Although conceding that short-term interest rates have been slipping lower recently, they said that loan demand has shown no slackening.

Cominco Reduces Lead Production

VANCOUVER (CP)—Cominco Ltd. has announced that its Canadian production of lead concentrates and refined lead will be reduced by about 10 per cent.

The company said the reduction was necessary because of a slowdown in the economic activity of North America and a resulting reduction in demand for refined lead in Canada and the United States.

U.S. Banks Reap Harvest On Credit Card Business

NEW YORK (AP) — If this is supposed to be a period of economic slowdown in the United States, somebody forgot to tell the bankers running credit card programs.

The number of people owning bank credit cards has skyrocketed in the last year and a half, while the dollar amount purchased with these cards has nearly doubled.

During 1969, bank credit card purchases reached an estimated $3.8 billion, an 80-per-cent increase over 1968, a Federal Reserve Board member told a congressional hearing recently. In the first quarter of 1970 bank card purchases jumped to approximately $1.1 billion, he said.

Bank Americard reported a nearly 100-per-cent increase in cardholders for the 17 months ended May 31. During a similar period ended March 31, Master Charge saw its cardholders jump about 13-fold. The two cards, which account for most of the bank credit cards outstanding, each have about 32 million clients.

The two cards are relatively new and have just begun to tap the market, industry sources explained.

Figures from Bank Americard and Interbank, a group of banks which include all Master charge card-issuing banks, show that about half the approximately 8,000 banks offering one of these two cards began doing so within the last year and a half.

Many of the banks offering charge cards are still operating in the red, industry sources said. It usually takes from three to five years before a plan becomes profitable because of high initial costs. The individual banks belonging to Interbank or Bank Americard run their own operations separately.

GOVERNMENT OF CANADA BONDS
DATED OCTOBER 1, 1970

Bank of Canada is authorized by the Minister of Finance to receive subscriptions for a loan, to be issued for cash as follows:

—1 year 6 month 6½% bonds due April 1, 1972
Issue price: 99.85%
Yielding about 6.61% to maturity
Interest payable April 1 and October 1
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

and

—2 year 9 month 6¾% bonds due July 1, 1973
Issue price: 100.00%
Yielding 6.75% to maturity
Interest payable January 1 and July 1
Three months' interest payable January 1, 1971
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000

and

—5 year 2½ month 7¼% bonds due December 15, 1975
Issue price: 100.00%
Yielding 7.25% for 5 years 2½ months

Exchangeable
at the option of the holder into an equal par value of 10 year 8% bonds to be dated December 15, 1975 and due December 15, 1985 yielding 8.00% for 10 years commencing December 15, 1975 and about 7.64% for the full 15 year 2½ month period commencing October 1, 1970
Interest payable December 15 and June 15
Two and one half months' interest payable December 15, 1970
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000.

The Minister of Finance reserves the right to accept or reject in whole or in part any subscription and to allot a total of $525,000,000 plus or minus up to 10%.

Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $150,000,000 of the new Bonds, open as to maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem the $450,000,000 of Government of Canada Bonds maturing October 1, 1970 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 6½% Bonds due April 1, 1972 are an addition to $115,000,000 of 6½% Bonds due April 1, 1972 and dated July 1, 1970. The new 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 are an addition to $200,000,000 of 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 and dated August 15, 1970.

The new 6½% Bonds due April 1, 1972, the new 6¾% Bonds due July 1, 1973 and the new 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 will be dated October 1, 1970 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable at any Agency of Bank of Canada. Interest is payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank without charge. Definitive bonds will be available on October 1, 1970 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to Government transfer requirements where applicable).

To enable the Government of Canada to establish six months in advance the amount to be redeemed for cash on December 15, 1975 and thus plan any required refunding, the option permitting holders to exchange their 5 year 2½ month 7¼% Bonds due December 15, 1975 for an equal par value of 10 year 8% Bonds due December 15, 1985 may be exercised only during the six month period commencing December 15, 1974 and ending June 14, 1975.

The new Bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new Bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

U Thant Urges Hijacker Court

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary-General U Thant stepped outside the UN Monday night to call for an international tribunal to try aerial hijackers.

In a speech to the UN Association of the United States, the Secretary-General said:

"It is high time that we go to the root of this phenomenon and treat its causes with novel remedies and not with old-time recipes to which it is largely immune."

Observers greeted the statement, delivered on the eve of the opening of the silver anniversary session of the 126-country General Assembly, with questions of how Thant's proposed tribunal could be formed.

The suggestion was stronger than anything Thant had said in his annual report to the General Assembly, on aerial hijacking or anything else.

REFLECTS CONCERN

This report, released earlier Monday, expressed cautious optimism in the world situation, including the Middle East, and made a veiled call for a Big Four summit conference on the Middle East.

Thant's speech in New York reflected the deep concern felt in much of the world over the Middle East situation in general and the question of aerial hijacking in particular.

But the fact that he made the statement outside the UN is considered an indication of the scant progress expected on the subject of hijacking in the next three months here.

This is despite the fact that Thant speculated in his annual report that this assembly will see the greatest collection of heads of state in history.

These leaders will be here for the 25th anniversary commemoration ceremonies in October. It is expected that President Nixon of the U.S. and Premier Alexei Kosygin of the Soviet Union will be here.

There has been no announcement about the attendance of Prime Minister Trudeau, but he is expected to attend.

'FANTASTIC' WIN AGAINST SEAS

HONOLULU (UPI) — The U.S. Coast Guard today termed the survival of two men and a woman after a two-month fight for life on the high seas as "really fantastic."

Nearly starved and burned raw by sun and wind, the trio was picked up by the supply ship Niagara Falls Monday, after drifting aimlessly in a 45-foot sloop named Galilee.

They were identified as Julian Ritter, Loren Louise Kokx and Win Heiringhoff. Ritter was identified as the skipper of the sailboat, of Santa Barbara. He told his rescuers that the Galilee's food supply ran out July 27.

The Galilee had been the object of a Pacific-wide search since early August when friends of the sailors reported they were then two weeks overdue on a voyage from Tahiti to Honolulu.

The Coast Guard rescue centre here said the Galilee was hopelessly lost and it was a stroke of fate that the Niagara Falls happened by.

"How in the world they got way up there we don't know. We're anxious to interview them when they return to Honolulu," a Coast Guard official said.

Ritter was described as "in his 50s", Miss Kokx, 21, also is an American, and Heiringhoff is from West Germany.

The survivors are expected to arrive in Honolulu Thursday aboard either the Niagara Falls or a Coast Guard cutter.

BNA Act Rewriting A Failure

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — The grand design of writing a new constitution to renew Canadian Confederation has clearly failed.

Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers, meeting in the constitutional conference Monday and today, are engaged mainly in a salvage operation.

Give Problem To a Commission

If we cannot agree on a new constitution, how can we patch up the old one?

Premier Ed Schreyer, the NDP swinger from Manitoba, suggests that maybe we should toss the whole problem to a commission of experts for 18 months.

Premier Ross Thatcher, the right-wing Liberal from Saskatchewan, thinks that perhaps Ottawa and Quebec can work the whole boring thing out between them, without bothering the other provinces which have more important practical problems on their minds.

But the consensus which seemed to be emerging from the sessions behind closed doors Monday and over the dinner table last night was to go to Square One.

Square One, if you can cast your memory back five or 10 or 30 years, is to bring the constitution to Canada before we try to rewrite it.

The present constitution is the British North America Act, legislation passed by the British Parliament in 1867 to join the colonies in North America into a new Dominion of Canada.

Humiliating Relic of the Past

To make changes in that constitution, Canada has to ask the British Parliament, very politely, if it would mind putting aside its own pressing business for a moment to amend the BN Act.

The British Parliament always obliges, of course, but all Canadian politicians agree that it is a humiliating relic of colonial times.

The Canadian constitution should be removed from Britain and brought under our own control, so that we can change it as we wish. And there of course is the problem.

Could the federal government make changes in the BNA Act as it saw fit? That would outrage the provinces. Should the provinces have to consent to changes in the constitution? That would give a veto to Quebec—or even worst, to Premier Bennett of British Columbia.

Before we can all agree to bring the constitution back to Canada, there has to be general approval of a formula by which the law can be amended once it is here.

Playing the Game For Years

The federal and provincial politicians have been playing the game for years without reaching a conclusion.

Back in 1964 they came close to a decision. Federal Justice Minister Guy Favreau, building on a foundation provided by his predecessor, Davie Fulton, developed a formula for repatriating and amending the BNA Act which seemed to meet objections.

All 10 provinces agreed to the scheme, dubbed the Fulton-Favreau formula, and the politicians and the papers were full of pronouncement about Canada at last cutting its colonial ties.

It was too early to fix a fluid and developing French-Canada within a new constitution. The opposition to the F-F formula was so fierce in Quebec that the Lesage government had to disown it and renege on its agreement

Robarts Criticizes Ottawa Fiscal Stand

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts of Ontario objected strenuousy today to a federal proposal to make major constitutional changes in governing the country's capital markets and financial institutions.

The federal position, not yet public, apparently was given privately to the provincial premiers before today's second session of the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Premier Robarts said in a statement he does not think "the major constitutional changes proposed" are necessary.

At present, the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction over currency, banking and monetary conditions.

But there is divided jurisdiction between Ottawa and the provinces over such subjects as trust, loan and mortgage company organizations, credit unions and other important elements of the capital market.

The federal government is believed to be in favor of bringing a wider part of the market under federal regulations.

Mr. Robarts said Ottawa's present powers over currency, banking and monetary condtions are adequate and that it can exercise jurisdiction over a wider area, if it needs to, by agreement with the provinces without a formal constitutional change.

"The federal government can exercise firm control over the flow of credit through Parliament's exclusive jurisdiction over rates of interest," Mr. Robarts' paper said.

"Hence, in Ontario's view, there are no serious problems in this field which require the type of extent of constitutional revision proposed by the federal government."

Get 'em on th' wing.

Hijack Attempt Fails As Guard Shoots Man

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A male passenger demanding to go to North Korea attempted to hijack a Trans World Airlines jetliner today. He was shot by another passenger, a private guard for a shipment of securities, after being in control of the plane for a little more than an hour, deputy sheriffs said.

Robert E. De Nisco, 34, an employee of Brinks, Inc., stood up and shouted "Police" and began struggling with the hijacker after the pilot announced the hijack after the plane landed.

He was undergoing surgery at Peninsula Hospital, Burlingame, Calif. He was said to be in serious condition.

The FAA said Irwin was shot in the right side of the abdomen by a Brinks' guard in civilian clothes. The guard was protecting a private shipment of a valuable nature and was not a part of the newly-established plane-guard system, the FAA said.

One shot only was said to have been fired.

Passengers said he boarded the plane in Los Angeles. The flight had started at New York, with a stop in Chicago.

PASSES NOTE TO PILOT

Moments before the pilot's announcement to the passengers the hijacker had passed a note to him reading: "I have a gun and want to go to North Korea."

It was not known whether the hijacker was actually armed.

De Nisco, Brinks said, was carrying an undetermined amount of securites from Los Angeles to San Francisco.

The plane, Flight 15 from Los Angeles, had landed at 6:06 a.m. and the pilot advised the tower that a white male passenger had told him: "This plane is being hijacked. It will be going farther."

The pilot said there were 17 passengers aboard, plus the crew.

'WE WILL NOT WAIT FOREVER' — ARABS

AMMAN, Jordan (CP) — More than 50 hijack hostages remained locked in their secret prisons today while negotiations between their guerrilla captors and Western governments were at an impasse. Israel seemed to hold the key to the duration of their detention.

At a news conference guerrilla leaders warned again today that any attempt to free the hostages by force would only endanger their lives. They demanded swift bilateral action in swapping hostages for imprisoned guerrillas and warned: "We will not wait forever."

Sex 'Expression Of Today's Society'

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — The Roman Catholic Church must come to terms with sex and eroticism as legitimate expressions of present-day society, the World Theological Congress was told today.

The plea came in two keynote speeches on church and society from leading speakers—Most Rev. Gregory Baum of Toronto, professor at St. Michael's College, and Prof. Antonie Vergote of Louvain University in Belgium.

Father Baum told the 200 theologians and 700 observers the one-sided dominance of reason over feeling and sexuality had caused a dangerous split in the consciousness of Western society.

344,000 Strike GM

First Joint Action

By The Canadian Press

Negotiators for General Motors of Canada Ltd. and the United Auto Workers Union were to meet at 1 p.m. today for their first bargaining session against the background of a strike at GM plants in the United States and Canada.

Meantime, all was quiet on the picket lines at six GM plants in Ontario and one in Quebec where 27,000 UAW members walked off the job early today. Also on strike were about 317,000 GM employees in the U.S. to make a total of 344,000.

The strike marks the first time that Canadian and U.S. workers have joined forces against one of the Big Three auto manufacturers.

Negotiations to avert the showdown dragged on in Toronto until 10 p.m. Monday without making any headway. "They were an exercise in futility," a union spokesman said.

He said although Canadian and U.S. workers are bargaining separately in Toronto and Detroit, the key to a settlement lies with negotiators in Detroit.

STILL FAR APART

He said the two parties were still far apart on wages, pensions and the cost-of-living escalator formula in a new three-year contract.

The union has a strike fund of $120 million, enough for seven or eight weeks of strike pay at $40 a week. After that strikers are expected to fend for themselves.

Affected by the strike in Ontario are 14,000 workers in two GM plants in Oshawa, 6,500 at an engine and parts plant in St. Catharines, 2,600 at two plants in Windsor, about 1,350 at GM's Frigidaire division in Toronto, 680 in London where diesel locomotives, trucks and buses are built and 2,400 in Ste. Therese, Que.

Immediately after the midnight deadline, workers at Oshawa lit bonfires at plant entrances and set up picket lines.

Richard Kittle, chairman of Local 222 at Oshawa, said workers have formed kitchen committees, police committees, picket marshals and registration committees and are prepared to hold out until "we get justice and equity out of GM."

HIT BY WILDCATS

GM's Oshawa truck line and the car assembly plant in Ste. Therese were hit by wildcat walkouts Friday night and the Oshawa car assembly plant was closed Monday before the strike deadline.

The trim plant at Windsor also was closed before the deadline because about 725

WHAT THEY WANT

DETROIT (AP) — Here are the union and company positions on the three major issues standing between General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers in new contract bargaining:

WAGES — GM has offered wage increases in the first year of a three-year contract ranging from 36 cents hourly for a man making $3.50 an hour or less to 48 cents for a man making $6.34 and up. A man making $4.02, the current average hourly wage in the industry, would get 38 cents more. The union wants wage boosts ranging from 61½ cents to 84 cents. The man making the industry average would get 63 cents more.

In each of the second and third years GM would raise wages by 11 cents for the man on the bottom of the scale, by 13 cents for the man making the industry average and by 21 cents for the man at the top of the scale. The UAW has not specified what it wants in the second and third years, saying it depends on the company's willingness to change its stance on the cost-of-living allowance.

COST OF LIVING — GM says it will guarantee cost-of-living allowances of a least eight cents hourly in each of the last two years of the contract and will raise wages, depending on how the cost of living rises, by up to 16 cents in the second year and by a maximum of 12 cents in the third year. The union wants the company to return to the cost-of-living formula in effect prior to 1967 which had no minimums or maximums.

PENSIONS — GM has offered to provide a $500 monthly pension for a man retiring with 30 years' service, less $40 a month for anybody for each year under 58. A 48-year-old worker with 30 year's service could retire at $100 a month. The union wants everybody, regardless of age, who has 30 years' service to be able to retire at $500 a month.

'60 Drugs Sub-Standard'

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon Monday accused Health Minister Thomas Wells of undermining public confidence in all drugs and drug companies by not making public a government list of "unacceptable" drugs.

He said in an interview the list should be made public "so that citizens using the drugs can change to those which meet higher standards."

"Wells cannot say that on the one hand 60 drugs fall short of Ontario department of health minimum standards while on the other hand refusing to name the drugs specifically, as if it were in the public interest not to know."

The 60 drugs were omitted from a comparative price index of 440 drugs which also shows cost differences between generic and brand-name drugs.

Wells said that although the index won't be made public immediately people could still get the information by consulting doctors, dentists, pharmacists and hospitals after Oct. 1.

The minister said the list will be circulated as part of the government's Paracost—prescriptions at reasonable cost—plan that is expected to cut drug prices between 10 and 15 per cent.

AVAILABLE ON REQUEST

Reporters could also get a copy of the list after Oct. 1 by making a special request to his office, Wells said.

Doctors using the index will be able to choose the most inexpensive drug on the list for their patients.

The patient will then be able to take his prescription to a pharmacist participating in the Paracost plan and have it filled at the cost listed in the index plus a $2 dispensing fee.

In announcing Paracost Monday, Wells said he was "very concerned" that the drugs rejected by the Ontario list were approved by the federal Food and Drug Directorate.

AUSSIE YACHT LOSES MAN OVERBOARD

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuters) — Australia's Gretel II lost a crew member overboard during the third leg of today's first race at the America's Cup yachting series.

The Australian boat, which trailed Intrepid of the United States by about one minute eight seconds after the second leg, thus lost more valuable time as it had to pick up the man overboard.

The rules specify that a yacht must finish with the same number of crew it had aboard when it started the race.

Jet Skids

NEW YORK (UPI) — An Alitalia DC8 jetliner skidded off a Kennedy Airport runway on landing today and split open, apparently as the result of a collapsed landing gear. There were no immediate reports of casualties or of fire.

West Coast Park Expansion Opposed

Ottawa has proposed a substantial increase in the West Coast national park, but has met opposition from the provincial government's forest service and two logging companies.

It was learned today that the federal proposals were made at a Monday meeting in Victoria.

The federal argument holds that the proposed extension is essential to protect the ecological state of park land already agreed upon.

The proposals would widen the boundaries of the west coast "lifeboat" trail to include the watershed of Cheewhat Lake, and a large watershed area including Tsusiat, Squalicum and Hobiton Lakes. The area forms a triangular territory at the western end of Nitinat Lake.

News of provincial opposition to the proposal brought immediate reaction from conservationists who warned against alienating the water sheds.

The meeting Monday was attended by representatives of the national parks service, the provincial parks branch, the B.C. Forest Service, and B.C. Forest products and MacMillan and Bloedel logging companies.

Under the West Coast parks agreement signed last April, the governments, who will share land acquisition costs, have until April 1, 1973, to consolidate the boundaries of the trail, known as phase three of the park creation.

Long Beach and the Effingham Islands are the first two phases.

The decision would initially involve federal Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, B.C. Forests Minister Ray Williston and Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan.

"We are again being short-changed by the Fall Ferry Schedule Takes Effect Monday

The Queen of Sidney is now undergoing refit and the Queen of Saanich will start being refitted Monday.

From Monday until Thursday, inclusive, ferries will leave Swartz Bay (Victoria) at 7, 9, 10 and 11 a.m. 1, 2, 3, 5, 7 and 9 p.m. Sailings from Tsawwassen will be at 9 and 11 a.m., noon, 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 p.m. Additional sailings on Thursdays will leave Swartz Bay at 4 and 8 p.m. and Tswwassen, 6 and 10 p.m.

Friday will see hourly sailings from both terminals from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

There will be hourly sailings from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. from both terminals Saturdays. Swartz Bay sailings from that time will be at 4, 5, 7, 8 and 9 p.m. and at Tsawwassen, 5, 6, 7, 9 and 10 p.m.

Hourly sailings from 3 to 10 p.m. will be held from both terminals on Sundays. Until that time sailings from Swartz Bay and scheduled for 7, 8, 9 and 11 a.m. noon and 1 p.m. Morning schedules for Tsawwassen are 7, 9, 10 and 11 a.m. There will also be ferries at 1 and 2 p.m.

The fall schedules will remain in effect until Nov. 30.

The Black Ball ferry Mv Coho also begins her winter schedule Monday, leaving daily from Victoria at 10 a.m. and 4:45 p.m.

The Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite's last Seattle-Victoria run for the season is slated for Sept. 26.

The Washington State Ferries began their fall schedules Wednesday with daily sailings from Sidney to Anacortes set for 11 a.m. and 5:15 p.m. Winter sailings begin Oct. 1 with a ferry leaving daily from Sidney at 12:30 p.m.

Nixon Holds Up PWA Runs

President Nixon has been to busy to cut the final red tape fetter to allow Victoria-Seattle scheduled flights by Pacific Western Airlines.

Lacking his signature on U.S. authority for a change in carrier, PWA was unable to take over service today from Air Canada, which pioneered the international route before the Second World War.

A PWA spokesman said the company could not inaugurate services without the president's signature, despite earlier sanction by Canadian and U.S. civil air authorities.

Meanwhile, Air Canada carries on its Viscount service on a day-to-day basis.

In co-operation with Air Canada, express, freight and aircraft ground handling services for PWA are being arranged through the national carrier's existing facilities.

PWA and Air Canada are sharing Victoria-mainland flights in accordance with national air policy.

NAVY

St. Croix, Yukon and Rainbow at sea, returning Sept. 22; Endeavour at sea, returning Sept. 26; Laymore at sea, return date not listed; Chaudiere at sea, returning Sept. 17; Miramichi at sea, returning Sept. 18; all other ships in port.

Repairs Started On Fountain

Repairs began this week on Victoria's Centennial Square fountain, whose lights short-circuited almost two years ago and have been blacked out ever since.

Replacement of the faulty flashing light system will cost the city $12,600, almost half the entire fountain's original cost of $30,000. The breakdown was attributed to poor materials.

The fountain was a gift marking Victoria's 100th birthday, donated by Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Saanich municipalities.

Work on the drained pool is being carried out behind a wooden barricade by Hume and Rumble, a Vancouver electrical contracting firm.

The job is expected to be completed by Sept. 30.

Repairs include replacing the lighting fixtures, automatic switches and an electrical panel.

Oak Bay Alderman Dies at 59

Alexander Hendry, a community-spirited man and Oak Bay alderman who spent five years on the municipality's council, died at Royal Jubilee Hospital Monday night after a lengthy illness. He was 59.

In spite of his illness, Hendry had attended council meetings up until two days before his final entry into hospital and maintained his position as sales manager and secretary of the Victoria Plywood Ltd.

Acting mayor, Ald. Ian Horne, today ordered the municipal hall's flag to be flown at half staff in Hendry's memory. It will again be flown at half staff Friday when funeral services will take place at McCall's Chapel at 2:15 p.m. Canon Hywel J. Jones will officiate.

Born in England, Alex Hendry came to Canada some 55 years ago, graduating with honors from the University of British Columbia.

In his 24 years as a Victoria resident, he made his mark in both municipal and community life.

He served as councillor and alderman in 1963, 1964, 1968, 1969 and 1970, heading major committees, including zoning, lands and building and personnel.

HELPED SCOUTS

For several years he served as treasurer and president of the local branch of the Boy Scouts of Canada, was a director of the Queen Alexandra Solarium and of the Royal Jubilee Hospital. He was also a director of the John Howard Society and a member of the Gyro Club.

An ardent golfer, Hendry served as director and vice-president of the B.C. Golf Association, being a member of the Victoria Golf Club and an honorary member of the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

He is survived by his wife, Grace, of 3253 Henderson; his mother, Mrs. Ethel Hendry, and sister, Margaret, both of Vancouer; and a brother, Noel, of Asbestos, Que.

Vote Set for Oct. 9 On Proposed College

The Greater Victoria school board at a special meeting Monday set Oct. 9 as the date for the plebiscite on the establishment of a college.

They also approved in principle the appointment of a public relations consultant to promote the concept of a college.

Education Minister Donald Brothers last week authorized the board to hold a plebiscite to decide whether a college should be established.

The board had been negotiating with the government since 1966 for permission to hold a vote.

If the vote is successful the trustees intend classes to begin at the present Institute of Adult Studies in September 1971. This was a reason for setting the date in October rather than in December with the slated civic elections.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore said, in proposing Oct. 9, the appointment of a college council and a principal as well as the establishment of curriculum had to be done if the college was to open next September.

Consulting fees will be $150 a day plus expenses, with a 10-day maximum on the term of the consultant's employment.

☆ ☆ ☆

The college is to offer academic courses for the first two years of university and the trustees hope to combine it with the present institute to offer technical, vocational and business career programs.

The trustees selected the name, Juan de Fuca, by vote from a list that included Thunderbird, Quadra, Haida, Camosun, Amor de Cosmos and Victoria College.

Hospitals, Engineers Nearer

A contract settlement between the International Union of Operating Engineers and 28 strike-threatened B.C. hospitals moved a major step nearer Monday.

The union's negotiating committee announced it is recommending acceptance of a tentative contract worked out by government mediator Ed Sims.

The union has been negotiating for four months with the B.C. Hospitals' Association and the association's labor relations council will meet next week to consider the mediator's formula and make a recommendation.

The union said the formula includes arbitration of some wages in dispute between the four locals involved and the hospitals.

Sims' term has been extended to Oct. 8 so bargaining could continue if necessary.

Plastered Man Spied Carrying Plaster Lady

Perhaps it was love at first sight, or maybe it was only a passing fancy.

Nobody knows for sure, least of all Vincent Barone, what attraction he found for the plaster of Paris lady riding a dolphin that adorned the hallway of an apartment block at 639 Constance.

The 33-year-old Nova Scotia serviceman, stationed for one month in the Victoria area with navy air crews, appeared in provincial court this morning charged with theft under $50 and possession of stolen property.

Judge William Ostler was told Barone was arrested by Esquimalt police at 1:45 a.m. this morning following a complaint from Lewis Fortier, a tenant at 639 Constance.

* * *

He had been drinking, police said.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge of theft because he said he could not remember anything of stealing the statue.

"But I do remember having about a thousand pounds of statue on my back," he told Ostler and pleaded guilty to the charge of possession of stolen property.

* * *

"I suppose you don't know what you were going to do with it?" Ostler asked.

"Had you been drinking at some place nearby?"

"I don't even know the neighborhood," Barone replied, "I KNOW I had been drinking."

Ostler asked Barone if he wished to call his divisional officer, who was in court, as a character witness. Barone declined. Ostler asked again. Barone refused.

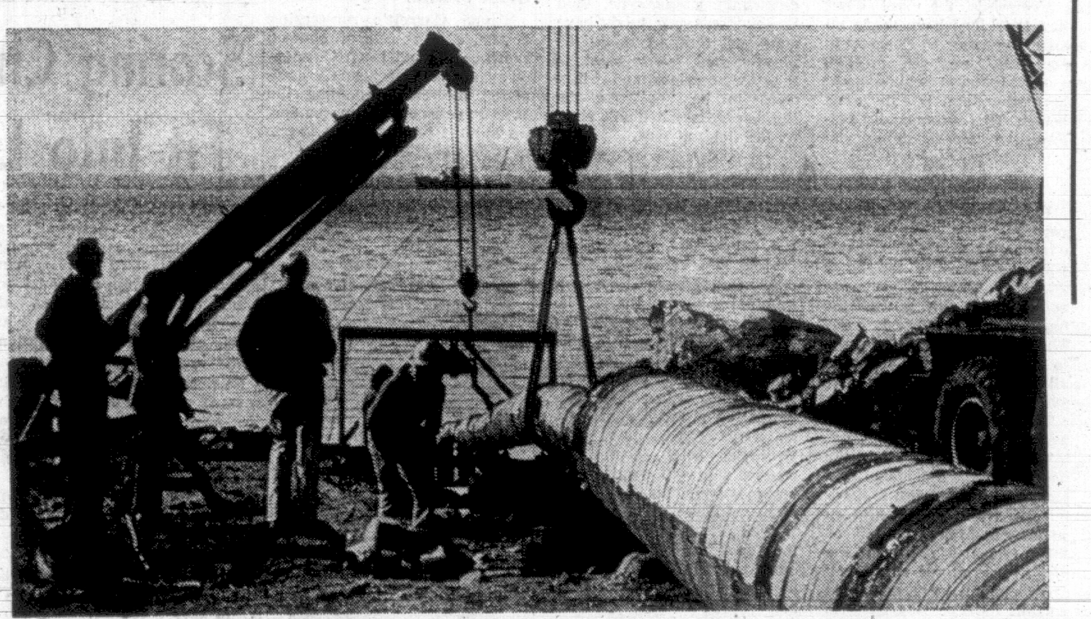
"I think it is a case for a nominal penalty," said Ostler in fining Barone $50.

"It's too absurd . . ."

THE GREAT SEWER ESCAPADE

Ratzlaff, If Anybody, Knows How to Lay 6,100 Feet of Pipe

BY PETER McNELLY



The Sudbury II Monitors the Operation Offshore

Bernie Ratzlaff clambered atop the rusty skeleton of what looked like a rigging for children's swings and surveyed the blasted gulch by the shore of Macaulay Point.

Ratzlaff, Charlie Archibald and Bill Poole, all contractors, had won a $494,000 job from the Capital Regional District Board to build the extended sewage outfall from Macaulay Point 6,100 feet into Juan de Fuca Strait.

Four 1,500-foot sections of the 36-inch-diameter concrete must be welded together, pushed to sea and sunk in 200 feet of water. The operation is taking all week.

Ivy-league sweater, blue jeans, cowboy boots and tipped cigar, Ratzlaff looked the essence of confidence and control. It was Sunday afternoon.

•

Saturday, there had been an unexpected brush fire which damaged 342 feet of pipe. Ratzlaff made a few calls, assured everyone that everything would be all right. By Monday the pipe had been replaced.

On Monday another hassle turned the three-day operation into an entire week's job. The tug, Island Monarch, which was supposed to look after the marine end of the job, proved to be too small.

Sudbury II had to be called in and delay cost at least a day—assuming good weather lasts.

Ratzlaff does not like to waste time. Sunday he was still hashing out details.

"Can you get me that plate? Can you get it today?" he was saying.

"Well, I need it as soon as you can get it. I've got my weld it. Can you get it today?"

"Yes."

"OK, that's fine. We'll take care of the rest." Ratzlaff climbed off the bars to check out other details. Archibald started to explain the week's operation which began Monday morning.

We talked for an hour or so, examining drawings, walking along the site. Overhead, own welders, you get it for me today, and my men will seagulls combed the polluted shoreline.

Archibald pointed to a V-joint at the end of one pipe. He said it was a pig valve, one opening of which would remain sealed underwater while the other fed to more pipe.

If the pipes should ever become clogged with sludge, he said, a diver could descend, open the valve and insert a cleaning roto-device to clear the pipe again.

At the outermost length of the pipe, the size begins to decrease from the standard 36-inch diameter to an eventual 16-inch diameter.

At the point where the pipe begins to get smaller, a have been bored. These dif- number of small portholes fusing ports, as Archibald called them, are spaced along the pipe until they reach the end. On Sunday, they were capped. They are opened Friday to sink the pipe.

This is the end which will rest in the deepest part of the water, about 200 feet down. The sewage will disperse through the ports rather than gush madly out one end.

The idea is to make the flow less concentrated as it breaks into the water.

Rather Than Gush Out Guck Will Disperse Through Small Portholes

Regional district engineer Bill Gerry said the effluent will form an oblong spherical shape as it emerges from the pipe.

By Monday afternoon, several side-boom cranes had sidled up to the first 1,500-foot section, the one with the watertight nose cone. Rollers had replaced the holding blocks under the pipe. The front end was already 200 feet into the water.

The plate Ratzlaff had been calling for had been delivered and welded to the bars. Attached to the plate was a steel yellow claw gripping two wheels about the size of truck tires.

Inside the claw, resting on the wheels, was the pipe. Each section feeds through this device on its way to the sea bed.

Out in the strait, Island Tug and Barge Ltd.'s tug Island Monarch was anchored in position. Under the direction of Capt. Roy Blake, she was to have remained positioned at 6,400 feet offshore during the entire operation.

But the 157-foot vessle was too small for this job. Ratzlaff and Archibald didn't know this until Monday afternoon.

By Tuesday, Sudbury II, the largest tug on the Pacific coast, perhaps the world, was getting set in the Island Monarch's place. Blake remains in control of marine operations throughout the week and Capt. John Webb is aboard Sudbury II.

Her role is to guide the pipe and keep it in line. The pipe is not towed to sea, but pushed along the rollers from behind by a tractor.

The nose cone of the lead pipe is hooked by a nylon rope to a winch on the Sudbury II. Though the pipe is flexible enough to sway several hundred feet off course without kinking or breaking, the rope keeps it straight and reduces the risk of excess stress.

Once on the bottom, the pipe has no stress at all. Only the floating and lowering part present real difficulties.

The pipe is concrete which has been protected from corrosion by a tar, fiberglass and felt paper coating. A peg board-like covering has been lashed to the underside of the pipe for further protection.

Two wires also run on the outside of the pipe as part of an electric battery hookup also designed to prevent corrosion. One wire is connected to the pipe at various places. The other runs away from the pipe to units called anode beds.

The idea is to run a low-grade current from the pipe to the anode beds. Somehow — you have to understand basic electricity to get this — the current prevents the pipe from corroding by switching the process to the anode beds.

But this trick doesn't match the space-age being used to keep the pipe in line. A laser beam is shot from the shore to a sheet of plywood on a barge near the Sudbury II. This beam directly matches the proper course of the pipe.

If the laser fails, a large searchlight can be used. And if that doesn't work, Sudbury II can monitor the course with radar.

Monday afternoon, Archibald was trying to contact the marine division of the RCMP. Another problem. They needed some patrol vessels to keep fishing boats out of the area. If one accidentally slashed the nylon rope attached to the Island Monarch, the delay could be time-consuming and expensive.

Archibald said the first section would be pushed to sea as soon as the patrol was established. The next section would be lifted on to the rollers that the first had left, and them moved up to the rear of the first.

The two are welded together, then pushed further to sea. This process is repeated until each of the four sections is joined. By that time, the pipe stretches nearly to the Sudbury II.

They'll Be Using a Laser Beam, Even Radar, to Finish Job

As the pipe is welded and pushed into the water, 11 barges assume positions along side. Nine of these carry powered cranes with a cradle, a device which loops over the pipe with rollers underneath.

The diffusing ports are opened once all the pipe is at sea. Even though the pipe is concrete, floats because of the air inside.

When the diffusing ports are opened on Friday and the pipe is no longer watertight, the barges begin to lower the pipe toward the sea bed.

The barge closest to the Sudbury II slowly drops the "nose cone" end below the surface. This operation progresses in stages, each barge dropping its share of pipe in calculated amounts.

The barge farthest from shore lowers the pipe the deepest distance. Each other barge lowers the pipe a lesser amount in proportion to the first.

While this is going on, a series of soundings is taken to guarantee that the cradle on the last barge never quite hits bottom.

Archibald says that the barges automatically float back to shore as the pipe is lowered. Lashed together, they return to shore at a controlled rate.

"Even my men don't believe me, so I don't expect you too. But the barges will move to the shore because the angle of the pipe will push them. The only problem here is to make sure they don't move too fast," Archibald said.

The sea bed is mostly sand and silt until the last 100 yards from shore. At 800 feet out, the pipe is laid on a gravel bed which reaches to land.

After the laying operation is completed, the last 800 feet is covered with two feet of gravel and a layer of rock.

A bypass pipe will be connected to a pumping station on shore later this year. Gerry says the station will be finished by January, and the first tests of the system will begin then.

The outfall will serve domestic users from Esquimalt, most of Saanich, part of Victoria south of Saanich, land north of the Gorge, federal properties in Esquimalt and Victoria and the Songhees and Esquimalt Indian reserves.

More than 20 men are involved in the job.

What happens if high winds or a storm occurs before the pipe is paid?

"In that case, we just pray," says Archibald.

BNA Act Rewriting A Failure

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — The grand design of writing a new constitution to renew Canadian Confederation has clearly failed.

Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers, meeting in the constitutional conference Monday and today, are engaged mainly in a salvage operation.

Give Problem To a Commission

If we cannot agree on a new constitution, how can we patch up the old one?

Premier Ed Schreyer, the NDP swinger from Manitoba, suggests that maybe we should toss the whole problem to a commission of experts for 18 months.

Premier Ross Thatcher, the right-wing Liberal from Saskatchewan, thinks that perhaps Ottawa and Quebec can work the whole boring thing out between them, without bothering the other provinces which have more important practical problems on their minds.

But the consensus which seemed to be emerging from the sessions behind closed doors Monday and over the dinner table last night was to go to Square One.

Square One, if you can cast your memory back five or 10 or 30 years, is to bring the constitution to Canada before we try to rewrite it.

The present constitution is the British North America Act, legislation passed by the British Parliament in 1867 to join the colonies in North America into a new Dominion of Canada.

Humiliating Relic of the Past

To make changes in that constitution, Canada has to ask the British Parliament, very politely, if it would mind putting aside its own pressing business for a moment to amend the BNA Act.

The British Parliament always obliges, of course, but all Canadian politicians agree that it is a humiliating relic of colonial times.

The Canadian constitution should be removed from Britain and brought under our own control, so that we can change it as we wish. And there of course is the problem.

Could the federal government make changes in the BNA Act as it saw fit? That would outrage the provinces. Should the provinces have to consent to changes in the constitution? That would give a veto to Quebec—or even worse, to Premier Bennett of British Columbia.

Before we can all agree to bring the constitution back to Canada, there has to be general approval of a formula by which the law can be amended once it is here.

Playing the Game For Years

The federal and provincial politicians have been playing the game for years without reaching a conclusion.

Back in 1964 they came close to a decision. Federal Justice Minister Guy Favreau, building on a foundation provided by his predecessor, Davie Fulton, developed a formula for repatriating and amending the BNA Act which seemed to meet objections.

All 10 provinces agreed to the scheme, dubbed the Fulton-Favreau formula, and the politicians and the papers were full of pronouncement about Canada at last cutting its colonial ties.

It was too early to fix a fluid and developing French-Canada within a new constitution. The opposition to the F-F formula was so fierce in Quebec that the Lesage government had to disown it and renege on its agreement

Robarts Criticizes Ottawa Fiscal Stand

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts of Ontario objected strenuousy today to a federal proposal to make major constitutional changes in governing the country's capital markets and financial institutions.

The federal position, not yet public, apparently was given privately to the provincial premiers before today's second session of the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Premier Robarts said in a statement he does not think "the major constitutional changes proposed" are necessary.

At present, the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction over currency, banking and monetary conditions.

But there is divided jurisdiction between Ottawa and the provinces over such subjects as trust, loan and mortgage company organizations, credit unions and other important elements of the capital market.

The federal government is believed to be in favor of bringing a wider part of the market under federal regulations.

Mr. Robarts said Ottawa's present powers over currency, banking and monetary conditions are adequate and that it can exercise jurisdiction over a wider area, if it needs to, by agreement with the provinces without a formal constitutional change.

"The federal government can exercise firm control over the flow of credit through Parliament's exclusive jurisdiction over rates of interest," Mr. Robarts' paper said.

"Hence, in Ontario's view, there are no serious problems in this field which require the type of extent of constitutional revision proposed by the federal government."

Hijack Attempt Fails As Guard Shoots Man

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A male passenger demanding to go to North Korea attempted to hijack a Trans World Airlines jetliner today. He was shot by another passenger, a private guard for a shipment of securities, after being in control of the plane for a little more than an hour, deputy sheriffs said.

Robert E. De Nisco, 34, an employee of Brinks, Inc., stood up and shouted "Police" and began struggling with the hijacker after the pilot announced the hijack after the plane landed.

He was undergoing surgery at Peninsula Hospital, Burlingame, Calif. He was said to be in serious condition.

The FAA said Irwin was shot in the right side of the abdomen by a Brinks' guard in civilian clothes. The guard was protecting a private shipment of a valuable nature and was not a part of the newly established plane-guard system, the FAA said.

One shot only was said to have been fired.

Passengers said he boarded the plane in Los Angeles. The flight had started at New York, with a stop in Chicago.

PASSES NOTE TO PILOT

Moments before the pilot's announcement to the passengers, the hijacker had passed a note to him reading: "I have a gun and want to go to North Korea."

It was not known whether the hijacker was actually armed.

De Nisco, Brinks said, was carrying an undetermined amount of securites from Los Angeles to San Francisco.

The plane, Flight 15 from Los Angeles, had landed at 6:06 a.m. and the pilot advised the tower that a white male passenger had told him: "This plane is being hijacked. It will be going farther."

The pilot said there were 17 passengers aboard, plus the crew.

'WE WILL NOT WAIT FOREVER' — ARABS

AMMAN, Jordan (CP) — More than 50 hijack hostages remained locked in their secret prisons today while negotiations between their guerrilla captors and Western governments were at an impasse. Israel seemed to hold the key to the duration of their detention.

At a news conference guerrilla leaders warned again today that any attempt to free the hostages by force would only endanger their lives. They demanded swift bilateral action in swapping hostages for imprisoned guerrillas and warned: "We will not wait forever."

Sex 'Expression Of Today's Society'

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — The Roman Catholic Church must come to terms with sex and eroticism as legitimate expressions of present-day society, the World Theological Congress was told today.

The plea came in two keynote speeches on church and society from leading speakers—Most Rev. Gregory Baum of Toronto, professor at St. Michael's College, and Prof. Antonie Vergote of Louvain University in Belgium.

First Joint Action

By The Canadian Press

Negotiators for General Motors of Canada Ltd. and the United Auto Workers Union were to meet at 1 p.m. today for their first bargaining session against the background of a strike at GM plants in the United States and Canada.

Meantime, all was quiet on the picket lines at six GM plants in Ontario and one in Quebec where 27,000 UAW members walked off the job early today. Also on strike were about 317,000 GM employees in the U.S. to make a total of 344,000.

The strike marks the first time that Canadian and U.S. workers have joined forces against one of the Big Three auto manufacturers.

Negotiations to avert the showdown dragged on in Toronto until 10 p.m. Monday without making any headway. "They were an exercise in futility," a union spokesman said.

He said although Canadian and U.S. workers are bargaining separately in Toronto and Detroit, the key to a settlement lies with negotiators in Detroit.

STILL FAR APART

He said the two parties were still far apart on wages, pensions and the cost-of-living escalator formula in a new three-year contract.

The union has a strike fund of $120 million, enough for seven or eight weeks of strike pay at $40 a week. After that strikers are expected to fend for themselves.

Affected by the strike in Ontario are 14,000 workers in two GM plants in Oshawa, 6,500 at an engine and parts plant in St. Catharines, 2,600 at two plants in Windsor, about 1,350 at GM's Frigidaire division in Toronto, 680 in London where diesel locomotives, trucks and buses are built and 2,400 in Ste. Therese, Que.

Immediately after the midnight deadline, workers at Oshawa lit bonfires at plant entrances and set up picket lines.

Richard Kittle, chairman of Local 222 at Oshawa, said workers have formed kitchen committees, police committees, picket marshals and registration committees and are prepared to hold out until "we get justice and equity out of GM."

HIT BY WILDCATS

GM's Oshawa truck line and the car assembly plant in Ste. Therese were hit by wildcat walkouts Friday night and the Oshawa car assembly plant was closed Monday before the strike deadline.

The trim plant at Windsor also was closed before the deadline because about 725

WHAT THEY WANT

DETROIT (AP) — Here are the union and company positions on the three major issues standing between General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers in new contract bargaining:

WAGES — GM has offered wage increases in the first year of a three-year contract ranging from 36 cents hourly for a man making $3.50 an hour or less to 48 cents for a man making $6.34 and up. A man making $4.02, the current average hourly wage in the industry, would get 38 cents more. The union wants wage boosts ranging from 61½ cents to 84 cents. The man making the industry average would get 63 cents more.

In each of the second and third years GM would raise wages by 11 cents for the man on the bottom of the scale, by 13 cents for the man making the industry average and by 21 cents for the man at the top of the scale. The UAW has not specified what it wants in the second and third years, saying it depends on the company's willingness to change its stance on the cost-of-living allowance.

COST OF LIVING — GM says it will guarantee cost-of-living allowances of a least eight cents hourly in each of the last two years of the contract and will raise wages, depending on how the cost of living rises, by up to 16 cents in the second year and by a maximum of 12 cents in the third year. The union wants the company to return to the cost-of-living formula in effect prior to 1967 which had no minimums or maximums.

PENSIONS — GM has offered to provide a $500 monthly pension for a man retiring with 30 years' service, less $40 a month for anybody for each year under 58. A 48-year-old worker with 30 year's service could retire at $100 a month. The union wants everybody, regardless of age, who has 30 years' service to be able to retire at $500 a month.

'60 Drugs Sub-Standard'

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon Monday accused Health Minister Thomas Wells of undermining public confidence in all drugs and drug companies by not making public a government list of "unacceptable" drugs.

He said in an interview the list should be made public "so that citizens using the drugs can change to those which meet higher standards."

"Wells cannot say that on the one hand 60 drugs fall short of Ontario department of health minimum standards while on the other hand refusing to name the drugs specifically, as if it were in the public interest not to know."

The 60 drugs were omitted from a comparative price index of 440 drugs which also shows cost differences between generic and brand-name drugs.

Wells said that although the index won't be made public immediately people could still get the information by consulting doctors, dentists, pharmacists and hospitals after Oct. 1.

The minister said the list will be circulated as part of the government's Parcost — prescriptions at reasonable cost—plan that is expected to cut drug prices between 10 and 15 per cent.

AVAILABLE ON REQUEST

Reporters could also get a copy of the list after Oct. 1 by making a special request to his office, Wells said.

Doctors using the index will be able to choose the most inexpensive drug on the list for their patients.

The patient will then be able to take his prescription to a pharmacist participating in the Parcost plan and have it filled at the cost listed in the index plus a $2 dispensing fee.

In announcing Parcost Monday, Wells said he was "very concerned" that the drugs rejected by the Ontario list were approved by the federal Food and Drug Directorate.

AUSSIE YACHT LOSES MAN OVERBOARD

NEWPORT, R.I. (Reuters) — Australia's Gretel II lost a crew member overboard during the third leg of today's first race at the America's Cup yachting series.

The Australian boat, which trailed Intrepid of the United States by about one minute eight seconds after the second leg, thus lost more valuable time as it had to pick up the man overboard.

Intrepid easily defeated Gretel by about 5½ minutes.

The rules specify that a yacht must finish with the same number of crew it had aboard when it started the race.

Jet Skids

NEW YORK (UPI) — An Alitalia DC8 jetliner skidded off a Kennedy Airport runway on landing today and split open, apparently as the result of a collapsed landing gear. There were no immediate reports of casualties or of fire.

West Coast Park Expansion Opposed

Ottawa has proposed a substantial increase in the West Coast national park, but has met opposition from the provincial government's forest service and two logging companies.

It was learned today that the federal proposals were made at a Monday meeting in Victoria.

The federal argument holds that the proposed extension is essential to protect the ecological state of park land already agreed upon.

The proposals would widen the boundaries of the west coast "lifeboat" trail to include the watershed of Cheewhat Lake, and a large watershed area including Tsusiat, Squalicum and Hobiton Lakes. The area forms a triangular territory at the western end of Nitinat Lake.

News of provincial opposition to the proposal brought immediate reaction from conservationists who warned against alienating the water sheds.

The meeting Monday was attended by representatives of the national parks service, the provincial parks branch, the B.C. Forest Service, and B.C. Forest products and MacMillan and Bloedel logging companies.

. . . more room to play

Under the West Coast parks agreement signed last April, the governments, who will share land acquisition costs, have until April 1, 1973, to consolidate the boundaries of the trail, known as phase three of the park creation.

Long Beach and the Effingham Islands are the first two phases.
